When Girls Should Marry.

Hon. Edwin Warfield, Governor of Maryland, says: "I asked the age when girls should marry I should say 24. That was the age of Mrs. Warfield when I married. I was 36. I have said to my daughters that I should not give my consent to their marrying until they arrive at that age."

Marriage for the purpose of settling a daughter in life is, as a rule, a failure and an unhappy one. No parent, and especially no true and loving mother, will wish to push her daughter into matrimony before she is fully matured and fitted for the grave responsibilities of married life. Young girls just out of school are not equipped for the ordinary household duties of wives and for the cares and trials of motherhood. They should, after leaving school, spend some time with their parents, giving their parents the pleasure of their companionship and learning something of the everyday work that will be theirs as wives.

I think that many lives are made failures by persons marrying before their characters have been formed. Young people are impressionable and romantic, and if left to their own free will are apt to rush into matrimony without properly considering the grave responsibilities of married life. Many cases have come under my observation where youthful and hasty marriages have resulted in unhappiness, discontent and lives of drudgery. The old saying, "Marry in haste and repent at leisure," proves too often true.

Young women and men should remember that the romantic attachments of youth generally are not lasting. I would not wish to be regarded as laying down ironclad rules concerning the exact age when a girl should marry. It might be at 22, 24, 25 or 26 years—it all depends upon the physical and mental development of the girl.
