CONDENSED STORIES.

Prince Henry of Prussia's Joke With a Peasant.

The Kaiser's popular brother, Prince Henry of Prussia, with his jovial manner and keen sense of humor, always enjoys a joke.

The other day the prince, who is an ardent automobilist, was riding in his automobile on a country road near Kiel, and a peasant insisted on staying in the center of the narrow road with his farm wagon. No amount of blowing of the horn by the prince could make him budge.

Seeing that the peasant evidently enjoyed being able to keep the automobile from passing him, the prince, putting on speed, pushed his wagon to one side of the road and passed by with a smile, which broadened as he heard the peasant shout after him that he was a clumsy fool, not fit to run a wheelbarrow.

A little farther on he stopped and sent his companion back to the peasant.

"When you called one of us a clumsy fool," the officer said, "I suppose you meant his royal highness?"

"His royal highness!" the peasant stammered, turning pale, while visions of a cell in jail arose before him. "What royal highness?"

"Prince Henry of Prussia, who drove the automobile and who sent me back to hand you this twenty mark piece for not being afraid of saying what you mean."

A Reversal.

Here at nine o'clock long years ago. Here yet my heart had grown to know The potency of woman's smile. I sat and smoked in bachelor style And basked before the girl's glow.

What cured I then for wind and snow? Let stormy blasts of winter blow. Careless I puffed my pipe the while Here at nine o'clock.

The times have changed. The long ago Is but a dream, a fleeting show. No peaceful pipe; I cannot smile— Oh, how can I contrive my plea To clothe these downy kides or so Here at nine o'clock? —E. A. Daly in Catholic Standard and Times.

The Mountain School.

BY ALICE E. WISHART.

In the beautiful mountains in Landour, I have commenced a little Sunday school class of three, and I am very happy in my first mission effort in Hindustani. Two little children of the heathen cook come every day to see me, and though we learn hymns on week days, on Sunday afternoons I try to give them a Bible lesson. Bhaguan, the little girl, is about six, a dear small brown little body, with the brightest of black eyes, and always a sore face or foot, which has to be doctored after the lesson. She is so fond of dawn (medicine), that it is evidently an inducement for her to come, but she is learning the hymns and Bible verses, the Lord's Prayer, a child's hymn, and some simple questions and answers, a catechism which I prepared out of my acquired store of Hindustani. Then, by way of reward, she has a writing lesson in the Hindi characters, and pictures to cut out. On Sabbath, Bhaguan's eighteen-year-old married sister and her little brother, Naider Lal, come for about the same lesson, except the writing and pictures. I am planning for a Sunday-school for all the children about, if I come up here next year, as there are swarms of them who have never been taught anything. They are so quick, bright and interesting that, with God's blessing, there is no doubt but that some at least may be won for the Saviour.

A Policeman's Testimony.

J. N. Patterson, night police man of Nashua, Ia., writes, "Last winter I had a bad cold on my lungs and tried at least a half dozen advertised cough medicines and had treatment from two physicians without getting any benefit. A friend recommended Foley's Honey and Tar and two thirds of a bottle cured me. I consider it the greatest cough and lung medicine in the world." Sold at Trout's drug store.

Heeter—Sipes.

Mr. Joshua W. Heeter of Dublin Mills, and Miss Sadie N. Sipes of Fort Littleton, were united in marriage on Wednesday, October 26, 1904, at the Washington House, McConnellsburg, Pa., by the bride's pastor, Rev. J. V. Adams, of the M. E. church.

Miss Emma Raker near McConnellsburg, attended the bride as maid of honor, and Charles E. Stevens of Dublin Mills, a friend of the groom, filled the rôle as best man. Immediately after the ceremony they returned to the home of the bride where a host of friends of the contracting parties awaited their return where refreshments were served. During the evening the Caluithmians turned out in an old time serenade.

On Thursday evening they arrived at the home of the groom where an elaborate supper was served. The bride was handsomely gowned and looked very pretty. The groom is an industrious young man formerly employed as a dry goods clerk in Altoona, and has been engaged in the picture business for the past year.

Mr. and Mrs. Heeter will reside at Fort Littleton. Their many friends join in extending congratulations.

Before commencing its use I was in such a shape that I could hardly get up when once down." Sold at Trout's drug store.

Its All News.

A newspaper is just what the word implies—the avenue through which the public gains a knowledge of the day. Every column of a paper is a news column. Even the advertisements are business news. The shrewd merchants realize the fact and let the people know through a well worded advertisement what news there is in the way of bargains. A clean cut and to the point advertisement has lots of news to many people every day.
