the seeds are planted in a seed bed in rows wide enough apart to permit of easy cultivation.

A fair average growth for seedlings the first year is one foot. In orchard rows the trees should be about thirty feet apart each way.

During the first ten years of the establishment of an orchard the ground may be used for other crops, but should be kept well fertilized...

The ambitious young man's $500 may not go very far in conducting a nursery and growing an orchard on cultivated land...

"The chestnut is not free from enemies," Professor Davis' report states, "and the success of cultivation in America will largely depend upon whether the insects which feed upon the nut and bur can be controlled."

"At present extensive experiments are being made which aim to prevent the maturing of the larvae in and near the orchard. The weevil is not the only insect enemy, perhaps not the most injurious. At least two larvae feed upon the bur or husk, and from what we have seen during the last two years these are the ones to be especially feared."

"The best plan tried is to remove all chestnuts and burs from the orchard as soon as the nuts are ripe. The burs are burned as soon as the nuts are removed, and the nuts are assorted, the defective ones being destroyed."

"Young man, buy some waste land and chestnut trees grow you a fortune while you wait."

BIG MONEY IN CHESTNUTS

on the bill of fare of the American people; yet housewives are constantly complaining of the lack of variety in foods obtainable.

"In chemical composition and relative food value, the chestnut is a better balanced and more nutritious food than other nuts, and of many of the cereals."

"In Europe the cultivated chestnut is an important food product and in Italy, France, Spain and Turkey it serves as one of the chief articles of food to the peasants, who long ago learned how to prepare it."

"The chestnuts may be used as a vegetable, or ground into a flour and made into bread, or prepared as a soup or pudding. Chestnuts made into candy are also well known."

There is virtually no time limit to the bearing ability of these trees. Records obtained in Spain and Italy show specimens more than 2000 years old, and still bearing with pristine vigor.

The number of young burs that will mature on a young tree is astonishing. A four-year old tree matured 200 burs, many of them containing two or three nuts, and all well developed.

From this tree early the same season 300 young burs had been picked to prevent too great a yield otherwise the matured nuts would have been smaller, or the tree might have broken down under the weight.

The nuts are from three to four inches in circumference, and occasionally one is found that will cover a silver dollar, while an average nut will cover a silver half dollar.

Here, then, is the hint to the young man who is seeking a fortune:

Grow chestnuts! "Mr. Sober," so states the report of Professor Davis, "had nearly four hundred acres of waste mountain land on his estate, and desired to reclaim it."

"Originally it had been covered by a dense growth of pine, but this had been cut off years before, and in its place oak and chestnut came up, with other hardwood trees. This had again been cut down and all valuable timber sold, only stumps, brush and worthless logs remaining."

"During the winter of 1896 the rubbish was removed from 100 acres of this land, and the following spring and summer a vigorous growth of sprouts sprang up around each stump, many sprouts being from six to eight feet high, and over an inch in diameter at the base."

"In the spring of 1898, two years after the clearing of the land, the grafting began. At first the results were not encouraging, but Mr. Sober learned how to do the work better as he went along, and 75 per cent of the scions grafted in 1900 lived."

"The trees first grafted were now in a condition to furnish an abundance of scions, and each year, during February and March, bundles of scions were cut and kept in a cool place, packed in damp sand or moss. The scions must be kept dormant, and usually about May 1 they are placed in boxes and buried among the cakes of ice in an ice house, where they remain until wanted. May is the month for grafting, although the season varies somewhat from one year to another."

In the light of recent experience it is claimed that if the grafting is well done 90 per cent of the grafts should live. An experienced man should set 250 scions a day, and do it well."

The yearly growth of grafts, when properly treated, is remarkable. They are often from two to three feet long when two months old. Professor Davis measured one that was fourteen days old and ten inches long. The owner of a grove may thus almost see his fortune growing."

During the last few years many experiments have been made with seedlings.

Seed for this purpose can be planted in the fall soon after the nuts are ripe, or kept over until spring and then planted in the seed bed in light sandy soil or pure leaf mold.

When possible, it is best to plant the seed where the tree is expected to grow, since the long tap root renders it somewhat difficult to transplant. Otherwise

THE FARMER IN POLITICS.

He Could Control all Elections, But Has Little Notice From Lawmakers.

The farmer has always been in politics, but usually it is as a partisan. On election day, bound by the strange spell of tradition and association he votes with his party. Neighbors whose interests are identical, vote for opposite parties and opposing candidates. As a result how little thought is given by the makers of platforms and the framers of laws to the interests and wants of the farmer.

But party ties have little hold on the representatives of corporate wealth and the monied interests generally. Sentiment plays no part with them on election day. They vote for what they want and the statute books show the result. What the farmer needs is to know and trust his fellow farmers to learn what are their common interests and to make his ballot together with that of his neighbors form so emphatic a demand that those interests dare not be disregarded.

QUICK ARREST.

J. A. Gullidge, of Verbena, Ala., was twice in the hospital from a severe case of piles causing 24 tumors. After doctors and all remedies failed, Bucklen's Arnica Salve quickly arrested further inflammation and cured him. It conquers aches and kills pain. 25c. at Trout's drug store.

Five, Instead of Eleven.

We got the copy for Ed Alloway's sale in Wells Tannery over the phone, and since the bills are out, we are informed that there should be FIVE head of cattle instead of eleven—2 good milch cows and 3 head of nice young cattle. Just at the time we were trying to get it, everybody in the upper end seemed to want to use the phone.

We cheerfully make this correction for the benefit of cattle buyers, for it would be the last thing Mr. Alloway would think of—to advertise more than he had to sell.

THOUSANDS CURED.

DeWitt's Witch Hazel Salve has cured thousands of cases of piles. "I bought a box of DeWitt's Witch Hazel Salve on the recommendation of our druggist," so writes C. H. LaCroix, of Zavala, Tex., and used it for a stubborn case of piles. It cured me permanently." Sold at Trout's drug store.
