Tommy says that there has been quite an activity in the real estate market down there during the last two or three weeks. Lee Funk bought John D. Mellott's farm; then John went down to Needmore and bought a town lot from W. F. Hart, and intends at once to erect a dwelling house, and a building in which to house his lumber mills, and establish a plant for the manufacture of sash, doors, and building material generally.—George W. Sipes sold his farm, a short distance below Needmore, to Alexander Mellett, with possession at once. Mr. Mellett will, perhaps, not move his family to the farm until about the first of April.

They proceeded from there to the home of the former's parents at Flintstone, where there was a bounteous supper prepared, returning to the former's home at Mrs. Emeline Robinson's on Monday, where the usual calathumpians turned out. Owing to the bad condition of the weather, they were few in number but mighty in noise. Adolphus and wife appeared on the front porch with his usual smiling face and received the best wishes of the boys, after which he gave them all a good treat. They returned home wishing him and his wife a long, happy and prosperous life.

MANNERS AND AMERICAN YOUTH. "The backbone of the American code of behavior is that when a woman needs help a man should give help. The foreigner's idea is that at fitting times he should offer incense." This neat summing up of "the way of a man with a maid" occurs in a discussion in The New Idea Woman's Magazine for February on "Why Our Girls Marry Foreigners." It is doubtful whether Mrs. Jean Holden, the writer of the article, has hit the only true solution of this perplexing problem, although it is possible that the disinclination of the American man to bow to open doors and to offer up incense may have something to do with the easy manner in which American heiresses are induced to restore the fallen fortunes of foreign aristocrats. Yet it cannot but be remarked that the number of wealthy American girls who still marry happily in their native land is sufficient to reassure American youth, and at the same time to vindicate, if it is a case of vindicating, real feeling against a superficial display which may cover a nature lacking in any sterling quality.
