While candidates for the office of County Superintendent are usually scurrying up and down the county at this season of the year, to make their calling and "election" sure, one candidate, at least, is not bothering the farmers very much, and that is Charlie Barton, who has so efficiently exercised supervision over the schools of the county during the past three years, and who is now a candidate for re-election. Unfortunately for him, a week or two ago, one of his little boys contracted scarlet rash, and the Health Authorities promptly put a red card on the door of his residence, and notified him and his family not to leave their home, nor to admit visitors until all danger from the contagion of the disease shall have passed and the quarantine shall be lifted. He will, of course, not be present in the convention next Tuesday, but the convention will be held just the same, and all of the directors of the county who wish to give him a lift, need have no fear in coming to town and attending the convention.

As to Washash Connection. The Washash Railroad announces that it will run trains through from Pittsburg to Baltimore via Hagerstown, by January 1st next. October 1 is the date set for the completion of the connection from Cherry Run to Cumberland. With the possible exception of the entrance of the Washash into Pittsburg, the building of 65 miles of railroad to connect the Western Maryland with the West Virginia Central from Cherry Run to Cumberland is the most expensive railroad construction in recent years. The cost of building the first five miles from Cumberland east averaged $250,000 a mile, and the average cost for the 65 miles is given at $100,000 a mile.
