> On the 15th inst., the writer, in company with William Mellott, left home to attend the Sunday school convention, held by the Christians at Clearville, Pa. On arriving there Friday, 10 a. m., we met a number of delegates and friends whom we never met before. The Convention was called to order by Bro. J. B. Cooper. The welcome address was made by Rev. J. H. Barney, and the Response by W. J. Bennet. Many schools were represented. The ousmess of the convention was harmonious-a good spirit prevailed in the congregation and the singing, conducted by Prof. Carns, was fine. The discussions on the different topics were very good, and the reports showed quite an increase in numbers

The ministers in attendance were J. H. Barney, J. W. Troutman, A. G. B. Powers, A. W. May, S. W. S. Fore, J. R. Logue, M. E. Hendershot and the pastor of the M. After this period of intel-Humanity-the light of the natural world-seemed to sink below the historical horizon, and a night of ignorance covered the earth. The result of this age to human life was fatal beyond estimation. Nevertheless, during this period, the greatest of problems was forever solved. And this people has moved onward. preserving and developing every intellectual talent, and ever widening its influence, until at the present time we see it enveloping

the globe. Now, admitting that there is an evolution of the mind, and that it has been sufficiently demonstrated in the successive eras of history, let us ascertain the offect of the mind at the present time on the universal works of man. Some one has truly said, "It is mind that moves the world." Then, in order to comprehend the powerful influence of the mind in human affairs, let us consider separately the effects of each active faculty of the intellect. Believing these faculties to be religious tendency, intellectual ability and inventive faculty, we shall so discuss them.

Religious tendency and in-born instinct of all man-kind, is the first and greatest element of deelopment.

Influenced by faith in a Supreme being, man has performed his greatest works. From the block of marble he has chiseled his ideal of Divinity; and on the canvas has placed his fancy's pur est picture. The world's sublimest literature has been written by men of faith. So inspired, blind Milton wrote his "Paradise Lost," Bunyan, in a lonely cell in Bedford jail, like a heavenly dreamer, composed his immortal Pilgrim's Progress; and Harriet Beecher Stowe gave a whole race its first sweet note of freedom. Poets of all ages inspirited by faith, have given the world its sublimest ep ics and sweetest songs.

Religion, which is the child of faith, is the hope of future life. It is the connecting link between mortal and immortal, known and unknown. Religion is the forerunner of enlightenment, and the very corner stone of lasting civilization. Among the religious be an abese, bearded Muscovite, lielfs in civilized nations to-day is Rotz's parents, Z. P.
