Joseph Edwards and wife visited their niece Mrs. C. L. Henry Sunday.

David Briggs is spending some time with John L. Henry.

Samuel Sheer and Harvey Fleming of Waterloo, were visiting T. E. Fleming and other friends last week.

Joe Miller of Philadelphia, has been visiting T. B. Cromwell's family.

Mrs. Thomas Cromwell is visiting her daughter at Pittsburg.

Samuel McIlhenny is seen quite frequently passing through our town.

W. L. Fields was pretty badly hurt a few days ago by a corner post breaking, while working near Mount Union.

William Hershey is having his house plastered. Gilbert Kerlin is doing the plastering.

Harry Stevens and wife, and Miss Bertha Wagner, of Loudig, were callers at Alfred Brown's last Wednesday evening.

Rev. Salter preached at the M. E. church last Sunday at 2:30 p. m.

Mrs. M. A. Fields had an accident last Wednesday morning which might have resulted most seriously.

She was on her way to McConnellsburg, and a slack-box and mud-box along the road caused the horse to scare and turn suddenly, upsetting the buggy and throwing Mrs. Fields to the ground.

She became entangled in the wreck and was dragged nearly fifty yards. Had it not been for Miss Ada Fleming catching the horse, Mrs. Fields would not likely be living to-day.

He Said "The Record."

A Philadelphia merchant who spends hundreds of thousands of dollars every year for advertising was asked the other day what newspaper he considered the best medium through which to reach the public.

His answer was unhesitatingly "The Philadelphia Record."

Then he went on to say: "I have used 'The Record' for years—in fact, ever since I have been advertising, and I find that it brings me the best results. It isn't necessary to experiment with 'The Record.' The experienced business man realizes that the money he spends to reach the readers of that paper is money well invested. 'The Record' is read thoroughly. A great many people, men especially, make a practice of buying several newspapers during the course of a day. They glance over the pages casually to see if there is anything of particular interest, and then throw them aside. But I have come to the conclusion from long observation that 'The Record' is the paper that is read thoroughly from beginning to end."

The Philadelphia merchant was undoubtedly right. There is no disputing the fact that "The Record" is the most popular paper in Philadelphia, and its influence throughout the surrounding country is evidenced by its claim to the largest circulation of any newspaper published in the State of Pennsylvania, a claim that is without doubt based upon actual figures. Nor is this strange, considering its merits. It is in every sense of the term a family paper—clean, wholesome, bright, entertaining, a welcome visitor to the home circle.

The growth of "The Record" is a gratifying tribute to the integrity of its methods. It is always fair and above board; it has nothing to conceal, and it is in every respect a model paper. More power to it!

IN FAR OFF INDIA.

Interesting Description of a Trip Made by Miss Alice Wishart, of Wells Tannery.

FORDS RIVER ON BACK OF NATIVE.

for us. It was his business to furnish them for temple devotees. Quickly, but modestly throwing off his superfluous garments, he plunged into the really cold water making such doleful sounds all the while, with now and then a shriek as he pulled the lovely blossoms, that we thought there must be crocodiles in the pond which he was trying to scare away; but it seems that it was only to arouse our sympathy and extract more price from us as we found afterward. We called out "Be sure and get long stems!" and he did—about four feet in length, I should judge.

Toward the end of the journey it got quite jingly, until we came to a full stop, not being able to go farther in the tongas. In front of us were cliffs and below us rushing water over marble white rocks. Most Indian rivers are so sluggish that the sound and sight of rushing, foaming water put new life into me, so that it was easy to climb up the hill to the bungalow we had previously engaged for a few days. It wasn't all on foot, however, alas! the rains had converted the usually dry river bed into a rapid little stream, and how was one to get across? I was going on alone in advance with the tongawala, a young fellow who could drive well enough, but had no ideas. So, while he stood meekly gazing at the rushing water, I set my teeth, and took in at a glance there was only one way to go over dry shod, and that was to be carried. Looking fiercely at the poor boy, I said, "Take off your shoes, pick me up like a bachecha, and carry me over." He grinned and didn't seem to know just how to do it, making several vain attempts which landed me plain in the sand. Then he made a desperate grab, and I hung on for dear life, and really got across with a very breathless boy, but a glad heart.

Miss Roderick, not fancying such a ride, and being too tired for the walk, was brought on a duff, which is nothing more than a small native bed, with upright pieces and a pole through the middle, carried by five men, thus she arrived on the veranda in state.

The luggage had come by this time, so we called the cook, who stays here all the year round, and gave the order for breakfast to be prepared while we unpacked eatables and other comforts and got settled in our respective rooms.

There are two nice bungalows here, owned by the Government, furnished with matting, tables, chairs, beds and mattresses, good toilet arrangements, nice dishes and silverware for the table, and good boats, with delightful scenery which nature furnishes. Anyone can have the benefit of all this luxury at a reasonable cost, by applying a short time beforehand.

It is a great boon to tired people, and a delightful change after a noisy dirty city. A fine wide stone veranda with a fenced-in patch of lawn looks directly down over the cliff into the river and across to bathing ghats and temples.

The water-lilies, with a good part of their four-foot stems cut off, grace the center of our dining table on the veranda where one can feast the eyes on nature's beauties, while accomplishing the more prosaic feat of satisfying one's appetite.

Just before sunset, we took a boat-ride up the river toward the Falls, or as near as we could go, for the current is very strong. You know I have never seen a real canyon, but I think these cliffs must be exactly like our western ones, at least they are like pictures of them, only the rocks are of snow white, blue, and black marble, pile upon pile, making a narrow gorge perhaps a mile long and many hundreds of feet high. Some places jagged columns snow white and smooth like frozen snow, and almost weird in the evening light, others seaweed, cracked, with brown fissures, and discolored by ages of storms only heightened the effect of ancient grandeur which penetrated the atmosphere of the whole place.

The Falls can wait for another time, while you get introduced to our Sunday congregation.

Saturday evening we informed our "mercury"—a tall, brown young Hindoo, who runs errands for us—that we had books and papers to give away, and any one desiring them would be welcome to come Sunday at 4 p. m. The boy circulated the news so well that at the appointed time about 45 men and a few children gathered in a most respectful group near the veranda steps where we first told them of the one true God, not made with hands, and His Son Jesus Christ, who came to save them, then, after some hymns, the gospels, tracts and Bhajan books were distributed. Many could read Hindi, and were as charmed and happy over the leaflets as Rachel would be over some delicious sweets. I had to ask a Hindu priest—in all his war paint and feathers—who was sitting near me, kindly to postpone his smoke until another time, and he graciously acquiesced until the meeting was over, taking some books away with him, which, we will pray, may enlighten his beclouded intellect, and mean much for him in the future.

The people are all so eager, gentle and respectful, yet so bound by heathen rites and practices, that one would long to stay and work here for months if it were not that there is so much to do in one's own appointed place. Work everywhere! One can be a missionary anywhere in India, as Miss R. says. Am hoping we shall get our home mail to-day, as I've arranged to have it sent out. My love to dear father, all the clan, Miss and Mrs. and my dear "Daddy" and "Year" our loving daughter.
