The Vaccination Question.

[However unjust the law compelling parents to have their children vaccinated or keep them out of school, may seem, the fact remains that it is the law, and there is nothing left but to observe its provisions. The suggestion that voters should know about what laws may be expected from the man who solicits their votes, is a remedy that may be applied hereafter, but that does not help in the present. —Editor.]

I see in the Fulton County News of August 23rd, an article on vaccination, and I have at other times, seen others on the same subject, in which parents were advised to be loyal observers of the law. Well, that is all right. A good citizen should be obedient to the laws of his country, and should advise others to be; but why not go a little further and advise the voters to be more careful in the future who they send to make laws. Laws should be observers of the people as well as people observers of the law. Is it not a fact there are people who care but little for human life. It's only the dollar. Try to rid the lawmakers of that class of people.

Vaccination is but one step toward the sacrifice of human life. Next, there may be a section in the law that may read thus: "All public schools shall be visited once a month by a physician appointed for the purpose, and for the benefit of science, he shall kill one child each visit—the doomed child to be the one standing at the foot of the class the greatest number of days, and any teacher or mother refusing to help in the killing of said child, upon conviction, shall be stoned to death." Then what shall we do?—advise the people to stand up and deliver their children for the benefit of science (the almighty dollar), and be good observers of the law?

A successful vaccination may be a preventive of smallpox; but is it not a fact that there is more die of vaccination than of smallpox? Did there not more die in Camden and Clayton, N. J., in 1904, of vaccination, than in five years of smallpox?

Voters, stop and think who made this law, and why; and what may come next. Do the people make the law? After the law is made, no matter how absurd it seems, one must advise the people to be good observers of the law. If the laws are to be observed, would it not be well to try to get a law that the people approve.

Picnic.

There will be a picnic Saturday, September 8th, afternoon and evening, at John J. Gordon's near Laurel Ridge school house. Everybody invited.

Too Deep To Wade.

Never in the history of the oldest inhabitant has the Potomac kept at so high a stage during the month of August as it has this year. Other years during this month the waters of the Potomac have been so low that it could be waded and the water hardly reaching to the knees. This year ferrying has been the only means of crossing the Potomac at Williamsport.
