OUR FAMILY.

By Miss Alice Whistart.

Let me tell you about the sending of to Cawnpore of the family in our Woman's Home. It has seemed such a happy arrangement, and the only way for me to get away for my vacation. Some of our converts have never been a way from here any distance, and were consequently so delighted and excited, that they had their little rolls of bedding and boxes all ready the night before, and got up at 2.30 in the morning so as to be on time for the 6:05 train! I took them down to the station, and we got them settled comfortably in a clear third-class zenanagari. Their dear brown faces were radiant, and every one insisted on kissing me good-bye. Dear old Jesoda dropped a kiss on my thumb in a vain attempt to reach my hand, and when she saw Phagwanti bold enough to make a dab at my cheek, she said, "Ah, I must kiss the Miss Sahib good-bye also," and taking my face in both her hands, printed a kiss on each ear. They scarcely knew what they were doing, and kept saying as the train pulled out, "Peace, and many, many thanks, Miss Sahib, for the vacation!" The thanks are principally due to Dr. Mina Mackenzie, who invited them.

When I returned from the station I found a fine-looking young woman waiting to see Miss Rodrick, who had tried to help her several years ago to come here and confess Christ. The girl had been prevented in some way, and has since been studying in a Government school in Lucknow, and though still a Hindu, has very strong inclinations towards Christianity. We found that she had gone to Allahabad for her vacation, put thought of going to Lucknow in a few days, as the people with whom she is staying try to force her to do puja (idol worship), which she will not. At my suggestion that she would visit us a few days, she said she would like to spend her vacation here, and, to our surprise, comes to-morrow. Our prayer is that she may know and love Jesus in such a way while here that she will confess Him. This would mean giving up her scholarship at Lucknow, and finer prospects materially.

Besides this we have traced, and hope to have come back to us, Nellie—who left us after being here a short time, and for whose return we have been praying daily. Then from last Sunday noon to Tuesday, seven came to us—three women and four children. Two women and one child will be sent to Calcutta, and the other with her two children will remain with us. You remember the lovely young Brahmin girl whom the Lord brought to us last July? This is her mother, who has been a Christian at heart for some months, and since her daughter's death has seemed drawn nearer to Christ. She has been suffering much in her home, and though we advised her to live for Christ there and try to win her husband and oldest son, she felt that for the sake of the two younger children, she must come away. As you must know, it is always an anxious and nerve-racking time when a woman leaves her home to become a Christian, especially a Brahmin. We put it all in the Lord's hands, and although the family suspected that she would go, and warned us that they meant to give us trouble, she was able to get away from the house quite openly with her two children, and come to me. I sent them all off forty minutes afterwards to Cawnpore in care of the "princess" Shahyadi, who is a very calm and resourceful woman. It was done before the family could ward the police and prevent her going. Later I had two men call on me to make inquiry about her, and one this morning, but God in His own wonderful way has preserved us so far, not only from harm, but from fear. Including children, this makes twenty-one souls in eleven months whom God has graciously brought to our Woman's Home.

BEDFORD MURDER TRIAL.

Rose Met Hang Unless a New Trial be Granted and Verdict Changed.

Henry Rose, who was charged with the murder of James B. Miller, a Rainsburg blacksmith, on the 23d day of May of last year, was tried in the Bedford county court last week, and on Sunday morning, the jury returned a verdict of murder in the first degree. This was the fifth time the case had been called for trial.

In opening the case to the jury Attorney Fletcher said among other things that James B. Miller was a hard working, thrifty and economical blacksmith, owned several properties and had a bank account of $1200. Miller lived alone.

Henry Rose, the defendant, had arranged to have a horse shod after he returned from his trip. Rose was seen going to the shop. Later the horse was seen walking to the street. Moans and cries were heard in the shop. The shop doors were afterwards closed and Rose was seen going through the house yard, which joins the shop, through the front gate. He took his horse over a route seldom traveled and Rose acted in a strange manner. He was later seen about the premises as well as a body being handled by him.

That night the shop of James B. Miller was discovered to be on fire, and the trunk of a human being, the head, arms and legs being burned off, was seen in the shop. In the charred flesh was found a bunch of keys. These keys opened the locks about the buildings of Miller, and it is by this means the Commonwealth proved that it was the remains of James B. Miller.

Rose was suspected, but not strong enough to arouse the arm of the law until the news came from the Court house that Henry Rose had entered a note for $2000 against James B. Miller.

The entering of this note was Rose's fatal mistake, as he was soon afterward arrested, and now he must pay the penalty for his folly.
