The Small Farm.

"Can a Small Farmer Live?" is the title of an article by a professor. Of course, it depends on the farmer. Probably the most successful farmer in the world lives near Paris, and he has a small tract of land, but every acre produces more than is usually raised on a great farm. The fact is that the production of soil is quite unlimited. Labor and brains and science used in tilling a piece of ground will make the yield beyond apparent possibilities, as we now look at it. The ground yields a beggarly pittance to what could be raised from it. A small farm is a fortune if the very best is made of the ground. Wheat makes men rich because they have boundless acres to devote to it. That fact does not warrant the claim that only great farms pay. Small farms will make them rich too, if they get from the ground what it can yield. But it is not so much the selection of crops as the getting out of the soil the resources that are in it. We heard a man say one time he put $140 worth of fertilizer in an acre of ground and got $1,000 worth of production It's the two things that from it. will make the small farm the gold mine and the Eden of the futurethe selection of the right product, and then making the soll do its best. -Ohio State Journal.

Servian peasants help each other by means of an institution known ar the moba. #### The Age of Lead. STOP, WOMAN! We are wont to speak of this era as the "age of iron," and there is no gainsaying that, industrially speak-

Nevertheless, few people realize how useful, if not absolutely necessary, to modern civilization, is that other metal, lead. Soft, yleiding, pliable, it is not much like its sister metal, but those distinguishing qualities are what give it such a prominent place in the arts and industries.

Modern plumbing, requiring many turnings and twistings, but withal tight joints, would be almost impossible without lead pipe. The greatest civilizing agent in the world-the printing art-is absolutely dependent on lead. Hand-set type, linotype "slugs," monotype type - all are made of compositions of which lead is the chief component-to say nothing of the bearings in the presses as well as all other kinds of machinery in which "babbitt" metal is used. Solder is another lead product-what a field of usefulness that one form opens up.

Then there is the most important use of all to which lead is put-paint, that necessary material which keeps our houses looking pretty - inside and out-and preserves them from decay.

How many of us thank metalle lead for the comforts of paint? Yet the best house paint is nothing but metalic lead corroded by acid to a white powder known as "white lead." Of course, there are many imitations of "white lead," some of which are sold as white lead and some which are offered by the name of ready-prepared paint under the familiar pretense that they are "just as good" as white lerd. But all good paint is made of the metal, lead, corroded and ground to a fine white powder and mixed with linseed oil.

White lead is also used in the coating of fine oil cloths and for many purposes besides paint.

'Red lead'' is another product of metalic lead and is what is known as an oxide of lead, being produced by burning the metal. Red lead is the best paint known to preserve fron. steel or tin, and is used largely in painting metal structures, such as skyscraper skeletons, mills and bridges.

There are many other products of the metal lead, such as litharge, orange mineral, etc., which are essential to many of the arts in which we never imagine that lead would be of the least use.

Verily, we live in an age of lead as well as of iron.

The sub-ject is one of the most difficult in the entire realm of chemical science and Mr. Root knew nothing about it whatever. But that made no difference. For two weeks, day and night as it were, he studied that subject until he had mastered it and he then when into the court room, cross-questioned the experts and won his case. How could he do it? Simply because he had a trained, disciplined mind that was able to master any subject however difficult and abstruse.
