In a letter to Senor Quesada, the Cuban minister, Pesident Roosevelt warns the Cuban people that the United States will intervene if they "acquire the insurrectionary habit.

The Cuban Congress, in extra session, empowered President Palma to use all public funds needed to prosecute the war against the rebels.

The government's forces will be tripled, providing the men can be secured.

More warships are being burried to Cuban waters with forces of marines and rapid-fire guns.

The destruction by the rebels of a number of large American tobacco and sugar plantations, including the Homiguero Central Company's Constancia plantation, near Clenfuegos, has quickened the desire for American intervention.

Alfredo Zayas, Liberal leader, wired the rebel commander to cease fighting pending negotiations for surrender to the American naval commander.

Oyater Bay, N. Y., (Special) .- After a protracted conference with Secretary of War Taft, Acting Secretary of State Bacon and Secretary of the Navy Bonaparte, President Roosevelt addressed an important commonication to Cuba and arranged to send Secretaries Taft and Bacon to that island on Sunday to make a thorough investigation of the condi-tions there and lend their influence to restore peace

The communication is addressed to the Cuban Minister to the United States, Senator Quesada. It is an impassioned plea to Cuba to realize her responsibility as a self-governing republic and to restore peace in the island. Her attention is called in no uncertain language to the responsibility which the United States bears to the island, and the certainty that such responsibility will necessarily be exercised should peace not be pre

Her body with the head crushed almost into a pulp was found lying on the kitchen floor by er husband upon his return from Chester, where he had gone to disof a load of farm produce.

When the husband reached his ome, after an absence of three cours, he found all the windows closed and the front door locked. Entering through the kitchen door, he came upon the body of Mrs. Pavitt stretched full length upon the floor in a pool of blood. A hatchet belonging to the farmer was lying near The blade and handle were covered with blood and the walls of the room were spattered. The woman's teeth had been knocked out, her arms were lacerated and her skull was crushed to an extent that showed her assailant must have wielded the hatchet with fearful force.

A trail of blood leading to the front window was evidence that the murder had left the house through the winodw and pulled the sash down arter him. Pavitt notified his nearneighbors of the crime, short time a posse of farmers was organized, and a few hours later William Kelson, colored, aged 19 years, was taken into custody on suspicion. Students at the high school at Sayre who nazed a fellow-student were given such a fright that they have not recovered yet. Their vic-tim was Abram Booth, a newcomer in the school, and they started to haze him in the approved method upon the steps of the schoolhouse. Booth fought fought back and in the melefell or was thrown headlong down the stairs. They picked him up but was unconscious, and, badly frightened, they hurried him to the hospital, thinking him dying. There the physicans found that he had little more damage than a bruised head and hip, while the boys who took him there and others who awaited their report had severe palpitation of the heart.

Six years ago M. de Rougemont appeared before the geographical sec tion of the British Association at Clifton and described with much detail his remarkable adventures in the heart of the Australian continent. He included among them some striking reminiscences of the pearling industry in Australasia, and added that, having been wrecked, he occupled some part of his leisure by riding tartles in the lagoon of his desert island. Yesterday, after the lapse of many days, he appeared-in a striped bathing blanket and a bathing suit-before a British audience at the Hippodrome to demonstrate the truth of this part of his narrashared M. de Rougemont's solitude in Australasia, or that it is a confederate in any way. Yesterday it lay placidly by the Hippodrome la-goon while M de Rougemont lectured once again on his entertaining experiences, and it gave no sign of intelligence while he described the whole art of turtle riding. Suddenly the explorer flung off his blanket. and seizing the turtle unceremonious ly by the scruff of its neck and the back of its shell hoisted it into the water. The turtle sank, but rose again. M. de Rougemont went in after it and in a moment was on its back. Down it went again and then once more rose. This time the rider grasped it firmly, crying, "Ta, 'Ra' 'Ra!" and slapped it with some severity. It was an exciting and amustors' point of view and M. de Rougemont also appeared to enjoy it very much. Of the turtie's enjoyment we have some doubt, but its general attitude was that of a passive resister. At any rate, M. de Rougemont did ride it.—London Daily Graphic.
