Mrs. A. E. Cline.

Lines on the death of Mrs. Anna E Cline, who died at her home at Burn't Cabins, Fulton county, Pa., Friday. February 22, 1907, aged 75 years, 7 months and 4 days.

Now the winds seem always sighing. Whispering dirges soft and low. On the hill poor Grandma's lying

Where the flowers bloom and grow White our hearts were theeding so Orleved we are, and sad to give her.

But our Father willed it so.

Oh I thus wheld someone could without here Childhood dreams are all about her

We will grieve for our dear grandma Like the summer doves that coo And we'll wait with any our longing For that heart so kind and true

When affliction sore has bound us. And dark clouds o'erspread our sky

No parent's arm will be around us. No tender grandma over title. How we'll miss our dearest grandous. There is none can ever know:

But we'll often dream of Heaven. Where our name loved ones go She has been a fulthful grandma Through all the flying year But now she has gone to that bright Heaven.

Where there are no frowns and tears.

All is simulate there and gladness. All is beautiful and fair:

And pain nor death don't enter there We will trust our Beavenin Pather.

For he fores His children all. And to His home of many mansion-Before long we, too, He II call There all the loved and blessed ones

All will be joy and bliss and sunshine. And our dear, rood Grandus there will be sold by Front's drug store.

Scores of writers and historians have described the stirring times of the cutbreak of the Civil War, but it is doubtful if any one ever drew as comprehensive a picture of the events as coes Carl Schurz in his "Reminiscences," in the March McClure's, Beginning with the happenings that followed the election of 1860, the patriotic Schurz arraigns Presi dent Buchanan's attitude and the "epidemic of compromise" that infected the whole country. The portentous first manguration of Lincoln is pictured with the hand of a master; and the attack on Sumter and the inception of the conflict are so described that the Great Tragedy unfolds before us as on a stage. Even the comedy folls of tragedy are present, for Schurz's droll wit relieves the somber scenes with humerous pictures and episodes.

In this number the author tells also of his receiving the appoint ment of Minister to Spain and how in the midst of raising a reg iment of cavalry in New York City he was ordered to depart on his mission to Madrid. The instalment closes with Schurz affoat on his way to Spain.

Weak Hearts

Are due to indigestion. Ninety-nine of every Ars due to indigestion. Ninety-nine of every one hundred people who have heart trouble can remember when it was simple indigestion. It is a scleatific fact that all cases of heart disease, not organic, are not only traceable to, but are the direct result of indigestion. All food taken into the stomach which fails of perfect digestion ferments and swells the stomach, puffing it up against the heart. This interferes with the action of the heart, and in the course of time that delicate but vital organ becomes diseased.
