Colors Of Vegetation.
The colors of vegetation are intensified by a strong sunlight and a certain degree of coolness, as we see in the redness of Northern apples and the deep tints of Alpine plants, and other conditions—such as the composition of the soil—have an influence. A recent attempt to color flowers artificially by chemicals added to the soil has been recorded by Henry Kraemer, Aluminator sulphate and potassium sulphate deepened the color of yellow roses and tended to streak the petals of the white carnation with red, and ammonium sulphate, aluminum sulphate, iron citrate and citric acid brought out white streaks on scarlet carnations. The effects were too slight, however, to promise commercial importance.

Verdict for Dr. Pierce

AGAINST THE Ladies' Home Journal.

Sending truth after a lie. It is an old maxim that "a lie will travel seven leagues while truth is getting its boots on," and no doubt hundreds of thousands of good people read the unwarranted and malicious attack upon Dr. R. V. Pierce and his "Favorite Prescription" published in the May (1904) number of the Ladies' Home Journal, with its great black display headings, who never saw the humble, groveling retraction, with its inconspicuous heading, published two months later. It was boldly charged in the standard and libelous article that Dr. Pierce's "Favorite Prescription" for the cure of woman's weaknesses and ailments, contained alcohol and other harmful ingredients, and that it was a "poisonous concoction." Dr. Pierce promptly brought suit against the publisher of the Ladies' Home Journal, for $50,000 damages.

Dr. Pierce alleged that Mr. Bok, the editor, maliciously published the article containing such false and defamatory matter with the intent of injuring his business; furthermore, that no alcohol, or other poisonous or habit-forming drug, or any other harmful ingredients, were contained in his "Favorite Prescription"; that said medicine is made from native medicinal roots and contains no harmful ingredients whatsoever; and that Mr. Bok's malicious statements were wholly and absolutely false. In the retraction printed by said journal they were forced to acknowledge that they had published a "poisonous concoction" from eminent chemists, all of whom certified that it did not contain alcohol or any of the alleged harmful drugs. These facts were also given in the course of the action in the Supreme Court. But the business of Dr. Pierce was greatly injured by the publication of the libelous article. His great display headings, while hundreds of thousands of people were misled, were never brought before a jury in the Supreme Court of New York State which promptly rendered a verdict in the Doctor's favor. Thus his traducers came to grief and their false slanders were refuted.

Painting for Profit

No one will question the superior appearance of well-painted property. The question that the property owner asks is: "Is the appearance worth the cost?"

Poor paint is for temporary appearance only. Paint made from Pure Linseed Oil and Pure White Lead is for lasting appearance and for protection. It saves repairs and replacements, costing many times the paint investment.

The Dutch Boy Trade Mark is found only on kegs containing Pure White Lead made by the Old Dutch Process.

SEND FOR BOOK "A Talk on Paint" gives reliable information on the selection, use and application of the Dutch Boy brand. Sent free upon request. All lead packed in 50 lb. kegs.

The kidneys have a great work to do in keeping the blood pure. When they get out of order it causes backache, headaches, dizziness, languor and distressing urinary troubles. Keep the kidneys well and all these sufferings will be saved you. Mrs. S. A. Moore, proprietor of a restaurant at Waterville, Me., says: "Before using Doan's Kidney Pills I suffered everything from kidney trouble for a year and a half. I had pain in the back and head, and almost continuous in the loins and felt weary all the time. A few doses of Doan's Kidney Pills brought great relief, and I kept on taking them until in a short time I was cured. I think Doan's Kidney Pills are wonderful."

Supplying The Explanation. The valet one morning was brushing his master's clothes. He introduced into the procedure a startling innovation. He made a careful search of all the pockets. In the pocket of a new waistcoat the valet found a sovereign.

Thereupon he took out his pen-knife, sighed and said: "For the waistcoat's sake it's a thousand pities that there's nothing else to be done. I must make a hole in this pocket large enough for the sovereign to slip through."—Tit-Bits.

The Kind of Food That Will Keep You Well.

The true way is to find out what is best to eat and drink, and then cultivate a taste for those things instead of poisoning ourselves with improper, indigestible food, etc.

A conservative Massachusetts woman writes: "I have used Grape-Nuts 5 years for the young and for the aged; in sickness and in health; at first following directions carefully, later in a variety of ways as my taste and judgment suggested."

"But its most special, personal benefit has been a substitute for meat, and served dry with cream when rheumatic troubles made it important for me to give up the 'coffee habit.'"

"Served in this way with the addition of a cup of hot water and a little fruit it has been used at my morning meal for six months, during which time my health has much improved, nerves have grown sturdier, and a gradual decrease in my excessive weight adds greatly to my comfort."

COMMERCIAL COLUMN.

Weekly Review of Trade and Latest Market Reports.

New York.—R. G. Dun & Co.'s Weekly Review of Trade says: Easter retail trade surpassed expectations, favorable weather bringing out a very large volume of business during the last week, while activity was not confined to specialties, but extended to all reasonable lines of staple merchandise. Wholesale and jobbing houses received many supplementary orders especially for dry goods and millinery, and further improvements in collections was reported.

Announcement by some railways that retrenchment must curtail plans for extensions has had no perceptible influence on the iron and steel industry, owing to the scarcity of stocks in all positions. Prices were held within season during the season of greatest pressure, when big premiums might have been charged, and the conservation of the leading interests is now bearing fruit. A few quotations of pig iron are slightly lower, but as a rule deliveries cannot be made before July, and domestic requirements are not able to satisfy requirements during the second quarter. This has revived imports, and one shipment from China is under consideration. Structural steel is taking a seasonably prominent position, specifications coming forward freely as open weather facilitates building operations, much business coming from the Central West and Pacific Coast, despite the possibility of a strike May 1.

The talk of providing motor road-time from South Africa is said to find extensive favor, for it is estimated that they can be constructed at a cost of $2,500 per mile, as against $23,000 per mile of railway, and that motor coaches would carry passengers and mail more expeditiously and with greater economy than a railway.

NEW YORK DAY BY DAY.

Some of the Things Done Daily in the Metropolis.

The hungriest lad they ever had in the Children's Court is Jonas Frankel, a husky 12-year-old youngster, who attributes all his woes to his stomach. He said he came to New York City, Mo., a week ago to visit an aunt in New Milford, N. J., with such an appetite that he almost ate her out of house and home. The aunt stood him for a week, he said, and then told him to be on his way. She is in moderate circumstances, but she told Jonas that she would be compelled to purchase a farm to supply his wants. On Tuesday, Jonas ate the larger clean, and when he asked for more, his aunt said it was impossible for her to appease his enormous appetite.

Then Jonas got on a hurt and came to New York. The pang of hunger were too much for him Wednesday, so he dropped into the Children's Society and asked for food. He devoured more than any three boys in the place could get away with, and when he was told after he had his fill that he was in custody he started up a howl.

She Got Her Bread.

A rescue in which neither man, woman, child nor pet animal was the object of the heroism displayed took place in the apartment house at 122 East One Hundred Ninth Street night before last. The janitor had just retired when he was called from his slumbers by a woman on the top floor. She gasped and coughed as she spoke through the house phone.

"Send for plumbers and fire-fighters. The gas pipe in my kitchen has fallen from its socket, and gas is filling the place."

The janitor telephoned for help and then ran to the top floor. The apartment was thick with the poisonous gas, and the family bull terrier was wallowing diabolically.

"Shall I go in, ma'am, and get the dog?" asked the janitor. "Dog!" contemptuously sniffed the mistress of the flat. "Never mind the dog. It's my bread that I have just baked, and I'm thinking of it. There are four beautiful, soft brown loaves in that kitchen."

The janitor drew back. He was not disposed to risk his life for four loaves of bread. "Coward!" the woman cried. "Watch me! I'll get that bread or die!"

She got it and took it to a place of safety.

Soap Exploded in Ship's Hold.

One hundred thousand dollars damages were asked in the Federal Court by the Ship Trust, owners of the steamship Haverford, from Fels & Co., soapmakers, of Philadelphia. The expert testimony of the court of naphtha soap in the hold of the steamship is cited as the cause. The bill of complaint states that on June 2, the Haverford cleared for Liverpool with the soap as part of her cargo. The bill of lading contained the usual clause exempting the stevedores from liability for any loss or damage to cargo or vessel caused by inflammable or explosive goods shipped without a full disclosure to the agents of the ship. The soap contained a large amount of chemically free naphtha, it is declared, was not disclosed. When the Haverford arrived in Liverpool and the hatches were opened there was a terrible explosion, which killed one longshoreman, injured others and caused a damaging fire. The explosion was caused by the naphtha fumes or gas, the plaintiffs declare.

Record Day For Aliens.

A total of 16,053 immigrants and 1,896 travelers arrived in this port on a dozen steamships Thursday. It was probably the record immigration day of the season, and kept a few more than 5,000 were handled on Ellis Island. The remainder were held aboard ship. There were not enough deputy collectors, inspectors, appraisers and immigration boarding officers to handle the work properly, and hundreds of sailors and women were held weary, hungry and discontented on piers for a long time.

$388 Grows To $6,000. After being a dormant account for more than 70 years, the balance of Stephen Sker in the Bank of Savings, originally $388, but which, with interest, now is about $6,000, will be divided among more than 25 heirs who have been found. Sker in 1832 deposited $400, but drew $12 in 1833 and then disappeared. From time to time the bank advertised for his heirs, but without success, and in 1901 George A. Smythe, of 964 St. Nicholas Avenue, made an investigation, with the result that heirs have been found in Maryland, Illinois, Pennsylvania and this city.

THE WINSLOW FIGHT.

A Still Remembered Incident of the Spanish War.

Commander John Baptiste Bernadou at last accounts had a berth on the battleship Kearsarge. It is a bigger ship than the one in which Bernadou saw service in the Spanish War, but if the Kearsarge gets into a fight at any time in the future there is little likelihood that Bernadou will have a hotter time of it than he had one day on the little torpedo boat Winslow in the harbor of Cardenas, Cuba.

Early in May, 1898, the Wilmington, Commander Todd; the Hudson, Lieut. Newcomb, and the Winslow, Lieut. Bernadou, sailed into Cardenas harbor in search of some Spanish gunboats which were believed to be anchored there. Commander Todd being the senior officer present was in command of the little squadron of three vessels. In order to prevent the escape of any ships of the enemy he ordered his two junior commanding officers to search either side of the bay while he took his own vessel straight down the middle of the harbor.

It happened, however, that the commanding officer himself first caught sight of a Spanish gunboat apparently moored to a wharf on the waterfront of the town. He signalled: "Winslow go in and investigate gunboat moored to wharf, there on the right, pointed gray."

"Ay, ay, sir," came the answer, and Bernadou took the Winslow in. The Spanish gunboat turned out to be the Antonio Lopez. Bernadou headed for the town with the Winslow under full speed. When the boat was at a distance of about 1500 yards from the wharf, smoke appeared from the bow of the Spanish boat and a shell whizzed by the port side of the Winslow. Instantly concealed land batteries opened on Bernadou's little torpedo craft. In a minute the American vessel was in the centre of a perfect storm of projectiles.

Bernadou was no laggard in returning the fire of the enemy, but the luck of nature was against him, for suddenly a haze settled down over the batteries of the Spaniards and completely concealed them from view. It was known afterward that while the Americans could not see the Spaniards the Spaniards could see the Americans. The Winslow kept on firing constantly, the gunners aiming as well as they could under the guidance of the sound of the Spanish guns.

Suddenly a shell struck the American boat, passing clean through the conning tower, smashing the steering apparatus and severing the steam pipe connecting the gear of the helm. Hardly a second passed before another shot jammed the rudder and cut both wheel ropes. Still another projectile burst close to the American and a fragment of it struck Lieut. Bernadou in the thigh, inflicting a gaping wound and throwing the officer to the deck.

Then there came a showing of pure grit. Bernadou rose to his feet, dressed his own wound, staunching the flow of blood and keeping knowledge of the severity of his injury from the crew. With his vessel disabled so that steering was impossible and with only one engine in working condition, the wounded officer succeeded in keeping his ship moving enough to prevent its becoming an absolutely stationary mark for the enemy's guns.

While in this crippled condition the American vessel kept up an uninterrupted fire from its guns and was aided by the fire of the Wilmington and the Hudson. Notwithstanding the apparent extremity of their case the crew of the Winslow managed to put the Spanish gunboat entirely out of action with some well planted shells, but the shore batteries were still in able fighting condition and they poured in their shot unceasingly.

Finally the Winslow half drifted and half worked its way out of range of the batteries against which its shells were ineffective. Bernadou, weak from his wounds, pitched up his ship in a trice and went back into the fight. It was during this second part of the engagement that Ensign Worth Bagley of the Winslow, with four members of the crew, was killed. A shell struck a reel of hose, killing the Ensign and John Varver, an older, and John Dneoff, a fireman, and mortally wounding J. V. Meek and Josiah Tunnell, members of the crew.

By this time the Winslow was becoming fairly riddled with shot, and Lieut. Newcomb, in command of the Hudson, notwithstanding the fact that his vessel was too frail to hope to stand against a band of shell punishment, asked permission to go to Winslow's aid. It was impossible for the Wilmington to close in because of its draught, and Commander Todd told Lieut. Newcomb to do what he could for the stricken ship.

The crew of the Hudson, after thirty minutes' work with the shells dropping all about them, succeeded in making fast a cable to the crippled Winslow and in towing the boat out of range. During all this time the Winslow's commanding officer, Lieut. Bernadou, wounded as he was and almost fainting from the loss of blood, kept the deck and kept the command. It was an exhibition of heroism of which the navy will be proud until the end of time.

As a matter of fact, that was a day when every man was a hero. Lieut. W. H. Scott and E. E. Mead were in charge of the work of passing the cable from the Hudson to the Winslow. They escaped death by a seeming miracle. When the Winslow was entirely out of range of the Spanish forts and the fight was over, Lieut. Bernadou turned over the command of his boat to Gunner's Mate G. P. Brady and then fell fainting. The action was over, and when the news of Bernadou's gallantry reached Washington its effect was to secure his advancement ten numbers on the naval list for conspicuous gallantry.—Chicago Evening Post.

WOMEN IN HOSPITALS

Experiences of Mrs. Rockwood and Miss Tierney

MISS MARGARET TIERNEY MRS. CHAS. A. ROCKWOOD

A large proportion of the operations performed in our hospitals are upon women and girls for some organic trouble.

Why should this be the case? Because they have neglected themselves, as every one of these patients in the hospital beds had plenty of warning in those dragging sensations, pains at left or right of abdomen, backaches, nervous exhaustion, inflammation, ulceration, displacements, and other organic weaknesses.

All of these symptoms are indications of an unhealthy condition of the female system and if not headed the penalty has to be paid by a dangerous operation. When these symptoms manifest themselves, do not drag along until you are obliged to go to the hospital and submit to an operation—but remember that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, made from native roots and herbs, has saved hundreds of women from surgical operations.

Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has cured more cases of feminine ills than any other remedy. Such letters as the following

Miss Margaret Tierney, of No. 328 W. 54th Street, New York, writes: "When only eighteen years of age our physician decided that an operation was necessary to permit of my womanly organs performing their natural functions. My mother objected and being urged by a relative to try Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound did so. I soon improved in health, the proper conditions were established and I am well and strong, thanks to Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound."

No other remedy has such unqualified endorsement as Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. No other remedy in the world has such a record of cures of female ills.
