

THE NEW BULLET IS MORE DANGEROUS

The Hague Conference May Discuss Question.

NEW BALL HAS MUCH SHARPER POINT

"Spitz" Bullet, Recently Adopted by the United States Army, Declared, However, by Ordnance Officers to Be More Humane in the Wound Inflicted, but Sorer in Death-Dealing Qualities.

Washington (Special).—The report from The Hague Conference that a disposition exists in certain quarters to raise the question of prohibiting the rifle bullet adopted by Germany, Great Britain, France and America has served to perplex the experts of the army and navy ordnance bureaus here. Even the medical officers in both services are at a loss to conjecture what reasonable ground of objection can be found against the use of the new cupro-nickel, sharp-pointed 1906 model bullet.

It was reported from The Hague that this bullet was more dangerous than the "dum-dum" bullet, but the experts here are a unit in declaring that the new bullet is, if anything, more humane than the old bullet, so far as concerns the nature of the wound inflicted by it. But, according to the ordnance officers, in one way at least the new bullet is apt to be more dangerous than the old, and that is in killing or wounding more soldiers. It was designed expressly for that purpose, too.

This is not because the bullet deforms upon striking an object, but from the reason that owing to its higher velocity, the bullet has a remarkably flat trajectory. The consequence is, that, traveling in an almost horizontal plane, the new bullet would be certain to strike an object within the 1,000 yard range, which the old bullet would pass clear over. Thus, the list of fatalities would probably be largely increased, but as no nation has heretofore made any objection on that score when the absolute necessity of war was demonstrated, it cannot now be regarded as a valid objection.

The new bullet is known in Europe as the "Spitz" bullet; was originally designed by the French and soon adopted by the Germans. Our own ordnance department last year made an exhaustive set of experiments to test its worth and decided in its favor. None are in use in our military service at present because it is not deemed well to issue them until a sufficient supply is on hand for the entire army. The manufacture is going on as rapidly as the cartridge makers of the country can meet the demands of the War Department and it is estimated that within six months, the new shell will be ready for issue.

The physical properties of the new ball as compared with the old are marked by lightness and extreme sharpness. It weighs 150 grains whereas the present standard bullet weighs 220 grains. It is projected by 51.5 grains of nitroglycerin powder, while the old ball used only 42 grains, so this combination is increased powder charge and decreased weight of projectile results in an increase in velocity of the shell from 2,200 feet per second for the old ball to 2,800 feet for the new. To the eye the most marked difference is the keen point of the new ball. The present standard bullet had a rounded or "snub" nose; the new ball begins to taper toward the point the moment it leaves the cartridge shell and is as sharp as a needle by comparison with the other.

Coldest June On Record.

Washington (Special).—The Weather Bureau announced that the month just closed was the coldest June on record in Washington, D. The names of the injured have not been learned.

HONORED BY HARVARD UNIVERSITY

Root, Bryce, Jusserand and Duke of the Abruzzi Receive Degrees.

Cambridge, Mass. (Special).—America's oldest educational institution, Harvard University, Wednesday closed its 271st year, graduating a class of 550.

Among those present were Secretary of State Elihu Root, James Bryce, Great Britain's Ambassador to America, and the Duke of the Abruzzi, on whom honorary degrees were conferred.

Honorary degrees were conferred as follows:

Master of Arts—Worthington Chauncey Ford, chief of the division of manuscripts in the Congressional Library at Washington, and Henry Arthur Jones, the dramatist.

Doctors of Divinity—Henry Sylvester Nash, professor in the Episcopal Theological School at Cambridge, and William Goodell Frost, president of Berea College, Kentucky.

Doctors of Letters—George Lyman Kittredge, professor of English at Harvard, and Theodore Barth, lawyer and journalist.

Doctors of Laws—Woodrow Wilson, president of Princeton University; Paul Vinogradoff, professor of jurisprudence in Oxford University; Elihu Root, Secretary of State; James Bryce, British Ambassador to the United States; Jean Jules Jusserand, French Ambassador to the United States, and Prince Luigi Amadeo, Duke of the Abruzzi.

At the alumni dinner in Memorial Hall Attorney General Charles J. Bonaparte presided as president of the Alumni Association. The Duke of the Abruzzi was the first speaker. He expressed gratitude for the degree conferred on him. "Harvard," said he, "is considered one of the most active intellectual centers in the world. I am proud to pay a warm tribute to this university in the name of my country."

Attorney General Bonaparte urged that it was the duty of Harvard to educate men from whom this democratic government could choose able and honest statesmen. There is too great a tendency, he said, among present politicians to seek that profession for profit.

"We need," he said, "men who will enter this life prompted by unselfish motives and by a desire to serve their country rather than personal ends."

Ambassador Jusserand expressed his appreciation of the degree awarded him. He paid a tribute to the great influence of Harvard. Referring to the present national administration, he declared that President Roosevelt had made himself the most beloved man in the world. He highly approves of the President's international activity.

British Ambassador Bryce received a great ovation when he rose to speak. Mr. Bryce said that this and the fact that he had been awarded a degree by Harvard were evidences of the strong friendship between England and America. He said America was to be congratulated on the financial support her universities received and on the fact that so large a proportion of the population was attracted to her educational institutions.

Secretary Root also was warmly greeted. He acknowledged his indebtedness to Harvard for many things, beginning with the friendships formed when he was a student here and ending with the degree just awarded him.

CANAL IS FULL OF WOES

Some More Resignations Said To Be Coming.

Washington (Special).—Another reorganization of the Isthmian Canal Commission is under consideration by the President and Secretary of War Taft. Demoralization has again struck the Panama Canal workers, and it is said that there is to be a new deal all around. Lieutenant Colonel George W. Goethals, of the Army Engineer Corps, who succeeded John F. Stevens as chief engineer on the canal, after having been on the isthmus less than four months, has, it is said, found the job too big for him.

It is reported that he has applied for a four-month leave of absence, and has asked to be relieved of his assignment as a member of the Isthmian Canal Commission and chief engineer of the canal. Major David Du B. Galliard, an army engineer, and second to Colonel Goethals on the canal commission, has also, it is said, asked to be relieved.

Jackson Smith, of Cincinnati, head of the department of labor and quarters and a member of the commission, who is now in this country on leave of absence, is reported to have tendered his resignation, and the same report comes from the isthmus regarding Colonel Beird, who has been in charge of railroads and transportation.

The resignation of three members of the commission would, of course, require its entire reorganization, and would be a source of considerable chagrin and disappointment to both the President and Secretary Taft, who had hoped that in putting the canal work in the charge of army engineers the problem of construction had been solved. The trouble arises largely from a general spirit of dissatisfaction and demoralization which spread through the canal employees with the departure of Chief Engineer Stevens. There does not seem to be any special complaint against the army officers, but things have not run so smoothly and interest in the work on the part of the men has flagged.

The resignation of the whole trouble is said to be political. The real reason for the resignation of John F. Stevens—a step which he did not want to take—has never been made public. He was making an excellent record, and was fast pushing the excavation work up to a million yards a month. Then he noticed that the class of men being sent to him from the United States was deteriorating. They were mostly incompetent, and chosen, not for their capacity in any line of work, but apparently because of their political pull. He protested, declaring his reputation was at stake, and that he would be compelled to leave the work if the policy of which he complained was kept up. There was no material improvement, however, and finally Stevens resigned.

SEVERAL INDICTMENTS NOW TO FOLLOW

Pennsylvania Graft Inquiry About Completed.

THE ARCHITECT WAS A VISIONARY

Former Governor Stone, the First Chairman of the Capitol Commission, the Final Witness—The Report Will Show That, as the Result of Collusion, the State Lost Heavily.

Harrisburg, Pa. (Special).—The capitol investigating commission completed the taking of testimony Friday, with the examination of former Governor Stone, of Pittsburgh, president of the Capitol Building Commission, by which the contract was let to Payne & Co. for the construction of the capitol. Mr. Stone was also president of the board of grounds and buildings by virtue of his office of governor in 1902 when the Pennsylvania Construction Company was given the contract for metallic furniture. This contract was afterwards made so elastic as to enable the Pennsylvania Construction Company to supply $2,000,000 worth of metallic furniture for the capitol which the commission's experts say could have been furnished at a profit for $350,000.

In the course of his testimony former Governor Stone said: "We discovered that Huston was a visionary. While a good architect, he was not a good builder. He was a dreamer, impractical, and we found that he had no care if he exceeded the appropriation of $4,000,000 for the building. It became a question if Huston could bind the commission to large expenditures by alterations in his plans. This, I think, he would have done had it not been for Bernard Green, the commission's supervising architect, who acted as a check on Architect Huston and prevented him from consummating his wild dreams for a capitol to cost $25,000,000. We bore with Huston as best we could and kept constant watch on him without having an open rupture. We did not care to get rid of Huston and delay the work with litigation."

The commission will now prepare its report to Governor Stewart, upon which civil and criminal prosecutions will be instituted by Attorney General Todd.

The report will set forth, according to a member of the commission, that there was evident collusion and conspiracy between Joseph M. Huston, the Philadelphia architect, and John H. Sanderson, of Philadelphia contractor for the capitol furnishings that the contracts for the $5,000,000 furnishings were improperly let and not to the lowest bidder, that the furnishings were not purchased at the prevailing market prices, as the law requires; that inferior goods were supplied not in accordance with the plans and specifications, and that there is evidence of shortages; that the members of the building commission and of the board of public grounds and buildings were derelict in their duties to the state in not checking the evident fraud and collusion that existed, and that there were gross overcharges and extravagances in supplying the furnishings.

COMMERCIAL COLUMN.

Weekly Review of Trade and Latest Market Reports.

R. G. Dun & Co.'s Weekly Review of Trade says:

Improvement has become more pronounced in distribution of seasonal merchandise, and with the reduction of retail stocks there is a broadening of interest in jobbing and wholesale shipments of fall and winter lines. Weather conditions have again favored both trade and agriculture, rapid development of the crops being potent for good in commercial departments. In a few exceptional cases the week has brought no change in the attitude of disposition to operate until results on the farms are assured, but at most leading cities the sentiment a distinctly one of confidence, and mercantile collections are much more prompt. Little machinery is idle in the leading industries except where repairs or inventories interfere. Building operations are large, although less than contemplated, owing to financial conditions.

Textile plants continue to produce freely, having much business already under contract, but orders are light at this time, owing to stock-taking by jobbers. From reports thus far available it is evident that supplies in second-hand articles are low, the last few weeks of warm weather having exerted a most salutary influence.
