Salem, Mich. (Special).-Thirty people are dead and more than 70 injured, many of them seriously, as the result of a head-on collision between this village and Plymouth, when a Pere Marquette excursion train, bound from Ionia to Detroit, crashed into a westbound freight in a cut located at a sharp curve of the Pere Marquette Railroad, about a mile east of Salem.

The passenger train of 11 cars carrying the Pere Marquette shop to the Michigan metropolis for their annual excursion was running at high speed, probably 50 miles an hour, down a steep grade. It struck the lighter locomotive of the freight train with such terrific force as to the freight engine completely

The wrecked locomotives lay side by side both headed eastward. Only a few of the freight train's cars were of the passenger train lay piled in a hopeless wreck. Four of the passenger coaches remained on the track undamaged and were used to convey the dead and injured to Ionia. coach was entirely undamaged, with only its forward trucks off the rails. These were the rear five cars. The two coaches next ahead of these were telescoped. The next car for-ward stood almost on end after the the roadbed and the rear end high in the air upon the two telescoped coaches that had been following it. Two conches were thrown crosswise of the track, and lay suspend-od from bank to bank of the cut, five or six feet above the rails. Of the baggage car not enough remained to show where it had been tossed. Portions of the baggage car and of the locomotive tenders and freight cars were piled in an indescribable mass of debris upon the top of the 10-foot high embankment.

James Boyle, a farmer, was working in a field probably 400 feet away from the track when the two trains nited by lightning. approached from opposite directions. The local freight was moving slowly up the heavy grade, and had just reached the curve, when the passenger train appeared running at high Farmer Boyle saw the passenger engineer shut off steam and apply air brakes, and saw the crews of both engines jump just before the crash. He ran to the tracks, where he found the uninjured passengers from the rear coaches running for-ward and joined with them in pulling out the injured, who could be seen on every hand. The dead were placed in a row alongside the track, and the injured were made as comfortable as possible until the arrival of wreck trains from Saginaw, Detroit and Grand Rapids made it impossible to send them to Ionia and The 28 dead bodies first by the French court. taken from the wreck were shipped to Ionia and the injured were placed on two trains, one of which headed ing his mother-in-law some rather for Detroit and the other for Ionia. The hearing was set for Friday morning, and Governor Glenn, being unable to get here in time to personally direct the fight, was in charge of the situation by telephone and engaged counsel to resist the release of the prisoners. Railway counsel ap-peared for Wood and Wilson and sought to prove by Judge Reynolds, of the Police Court, and other wifnesses that Reynolds was instigating the prosecution of the railway for der to prevent Judge Pritchard from hearing the case on habeas corpus, and had waited until Judge Pritchard had left the city, procured other warrants on the same charge and rushed the defendants to trial.

Counsel for the State vehemently protested against Judge Pritchard investigating the motives of a court of equal dignity with his own.

It was asserted that when Judge Pritchard left Asheville Wednesday evening he would call on President Roosevelt for force necessary to en-force his writ, but public sentiment all over the State was so aroused that the railroad backed down and a conflict was avoided by direction to the United States Marshal not to serve the writ on the Sheriff, and Judge Pritchard returned to Asheville.
