A Washington educator is telling a story about a young medical stu-dent of his who is interested in insanity symptoms and is a sort of ama-teur alienist. The other day the student got a chance to visit one of the wards in the asylum for the insane, and having heard that there was a man confined there who labored under the hallucination that he was God the student asked that he be allowed to see that patient first, as he appeared the most promising for his investigation. He was taken to the ward where the lunatic was confined and the following conversation ensued:

Women And Hairpins.

"We buy hairpins by the hundredweight and sell in one form or another about three gross a day," said the foreman of the notion counter in a department store.

"A woman with three or four grown daughters buys hairpins by the pound and buys a good many pounds in the course of a year at that. Where there is only one woman in the house she buys her hairpins by the package, put up in some fancy and convenient shape. The latter way is the more expensive, of course.

"Women with hairpins are very much like men with matches. Some shed them as they go and never can find one when they want it. Others keep them where they can make up the forgetfulness of their less careful sisters."
