

A TEMPERANCE WONDRAK.

MISS BESSIE FARRELL, 1011 Third Ave., Brooklyn, N. Y., is President of the Young People's Christian Temperance Association. She writes:

"Peruna is certainly a valuable nerve and blood remedy, calculated to build up the broken-down health of worn-out women. I have found by personal experience that it acts as a wonderful restorer of lost strength, assisting the stomach to assimilate and digest the food, and building up worn-out tissues. In my work I have had occasion to recommend it freely, especially to women."

"I know of nothing which is better to build up the strength of a young mother, in fact all the ailments peculiar to women, so I am pleased to give it my hearty endorsement."

Dr. Hartman has prescribed Peruna for many thousands of women, and he never fails to receive a multitude of letters like the above, thanking him for the wonderful benefits received.

One on the Teacher.

A small boy started something over at his school on the West Side not long ago.

"How's it come Chagrin Falls has all dried up?" he inquired of the teacher in geography class one day.

The teacher denied that the falls had dried up. All the other pupils declared that he was wrong.

"The boy insisted that he was right. He stuck to his assertion so stoutly that the teacher got considerably provoked at him. 'That'll be enough, now, James,' she said. 'If you can bring in any proof of what you have to say, we shall be glad to see it, but we will drop the discussion for the present.'"

The next morning the boy walked in and laid a newspaper clipping on the teacher's desk. It was an account of an election at Chagrin Falls and was headed, "Chagrin Falls Goes 'Dry.'"—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

The Moral Lesson.

"Cabbages? Yes, ma'am—eight back here," replied the grocer to the old woman who had made inquiry.

"Are they nice?" she asked.

"Splendid, ma'am."

"Sold heads?"

"Sold a rock."

"And the price?"

"Seven cents, ma'am."

"But they used to be six."

"I know, ma'am, but that was earlier in the season, before they had fully matured. Seven is the price now."

"Then I don't want 'em. I have had enough of this frozen finance, and don't propose to help bring on another panic. Gimme a squash for five cents."

PARSON, GAMBLER, PREACHES ON THE EVIL

Missouri Preacher First Repays to His Flock the Money He Lost at Poker—Old Passion Seized Him—He Tells Congregation Gambling Fever Consumes Its Victims Speaking From Experience

Lee's Summit, Mo.—Perhaps the most astounding revelation ever made in a house of worship came from the lips of the Rev. Charles S. Brown, pastor of the Christian Church in this town, in a sermon on the evil results of gambling, for the preacher spoke from recent experience.

Brown told his congregation that the passion for gambling utterly consumed its victims, making every man of them forget friends, family, home and God. He did not refer to himself by name, but every one in the church knew what he said was less a sermon than a confession, for he returned to town with a draft for $300 and repaid to members of his congregation that amount borrowed from several of them. He lost in a poker game in Kansas City a few days ago the loans he got from his flock.

It was when he failed to repay the lenders promptly that they started an investigation resulting in the discovery that the parson had frittered away their money at the gambling table. Brown did not deny the charge. He contented himself with promising to raise the money, asking for a few days of grace. Then he left town and was absent until next morning.

The clergyman, when the elders of the church taxed him with his sin, said he had succumbed to a craze for gambling to which he had been subjected years before. He thought he had conquered the passion forever, he said, but a few days ago, finding himself in Kansas City and hearing men in a hotel remark that there was a poker game in a certain place, he was seized with a desire to handle the cards and chips once more.

Brown dressed himself in clothes as unlike those of his calling as he could get and went to the gambling house. He was admitted readily, and soon he was playing as if he had never entered a pulpit. He explained to the elders that it was the first time he had touched a card since entering the ministry. It was before he became a clergyman that he did his gambling of former years.

To his amazement, the gaming fever was so strong in him that he lost all the money he had in his pocket. It amounted to $300, which he had borrowed in various amounts from members of his flock for a legitimate purpose.

Brown, when he returned with the money necessary to reimburse his flock, asked the leading men of the congregation to let him address the men and women of the church once again. He said he had something to say, to them which might work incalculable good.

The elders gave their consent, and on Sunday night apparently every member of the congregation was in the church. Women gazed at their pastor with shocked looks. Men watched him with queer expressions. He seemed affected by the battery of glances, but he did not flinch from the ordeal he had set for himself.

Instead, he walked with bowed head and steady stride to the pulpit and announced that he would preach on the evils of gambling. A ripple ran through the congregation, for all knew of his recent experience, but everybody became serious again at sight of the man's white face.

"There is no other vice that gets such a hold on a man as does gambling," said the preacher, looking straight into the faces of his flock. It consumes him utterly. Gripped in its clutches, he forgets his friends, his family, his home and his God. Once he yields to it he cannot tell to what lengths it may lead him.

"Gambling has been responsible for lying, theft, suicide and murder. Its subjects are more abject slaves than those of drink. There is only one thing to do when the passion for gaming seizes one, and that is to fight it off from the first with all the strength at a man's command. For if the victim does not conquer early in the struggle, he will find it next to impossible to do so afterward."

Women sobbed loudly as the clergyman proceeded with his sermon. Men who had gazed curiously at the parson as his entrance looked at him with sympathy. The officers of the church appeared to be affected deeply by the pastor's words.

Not a movement was made by the big crowd, which filled the building to the doors, while Brown, from the pulpit, strove to save others from the vice that had proved too strong for him.

It is believed the preacher fears his weakness too much to follow his calling further, but it is said the church officers will urge him to keep his pulpit, in the hope that one who has suffered as he undoubtedly has done will be the stronger for his open confession and the better able to restrain any tendency to gambling that may exist among those in his charge.

BOY COCAINE USERS ON THE INCREASE

He declared that hundreds upon hundreds of Boston boys are slaves to the cocaine habit, that the harmful drug can be purchased in saloons, from cheap drug stores and on the street from illegal agents as freely as one can buy fruit from street hawkers and that the juvenile courts are filling up with youths who have admitted that their downfall can be traced to the vicious drug habit.

Said Dr. Harrington in part: "From judges, from lawyers, from probation officers and others, I have received hundreds of pitiful letters giving me

OPHIR IS FOUND, SAYS DR. PETERS.

Land of Gold Where Solomon and David Got Riches is in Southern Africa.

Dr. Carl Peters, so well known in connection with the opening up of Africa, has started on a lecturing tour in Germany with two objects in view—first, to win recruits to the cause of German expansion in the Dark Continent; second, to prove that he has found the famous gold land of Ophir.

The reader who has forgotten where the word "Ophir" occurs will find it in the Biblical books of Kings and Chronicles. One thousand years before Christ King David and the wise Solomon, his son, sent to Ophir ships which brought back from thence gold and precious stones, ivory and valuable timber, which these magnificent rulers employed in building their gorgeous temples and palaces.

Peters began to think of this subject after he had discovered an old Flemish map of the eighteenth century in which he saw the word "Ophir" printed across one of the least known districts of Southern Central Africa. The first thing that struck him was the similarity of the names Africa and Ophir. There was first the Arabic word Afr (Ophir) which when Latinized became Afer. It was an easy transition from Afer to Africa. He thought further and deeper and began to read Christian tradition. All pointed to South Africa.

The ancient literature he read made Peters also acquainted with the fact that at all ages since Solomon's time Ophir had been sought in numerous parts of the world—in Arabia, Persia, Mesopotamia, India; it had even been sought in America, and there are ancient Spanish records which state that among the early conquistadores of Peru and Mexico were not a few who believed that they had found not only El Dorado but Ophir as well.

Suddenly it occurred to Peters that the famous gold land must be in the neighborhood of Simbabwe in Southeast Africa. It was an inspiration.

He was attacked for this belief, and theologians and others with a different theory cast on him the reproach that he was not a Semitic scholar.

But he maintained that he was right. The ships of Solomon, he said, passed through the Red Sea and skirted the coast of Africa until they arrived at their port. And they certainly must have brought back millions in gold. It might not have been enough to satisfy the maw of America in the present crisis, but for those remote days it must have been extraordinary.

Only Africa could have produced that quantity of gold. Arabia and India have never produced gold in remarkable quantities.

In his description of the Zambesi territory Peters says he has seen innumerable traces which compel him to believe that there and nowhere else was the land of Ophir. Forsaken mines by the score are there, and no less than 75,000 places where gold has been dug at depths of from thirty to forty feet. Ruins of towns and villages, remains of temples and palaces speak eloquently of the past glories of the region.

They point, moreover, to Phoenician origin. Mighty terraces and towers raised by the hand of man are still traceable. These builders were certainly of a race superior to the negro. One still finds in the graves remains of things which point to the worship of Baal.

But Peters' weightiest argument is that in the Septuagint translation of the Bible Ophir is called Sofala, and the Arabs to the present day call the Zambesi district indifferently Sofala and "the land of gold."—New York World.

A Dog Which Mothers Pheasants.

A remarkable instance of reversion of instinct in an animal is reported from Denver, Col. Queenie, a cocker spaniel kept as a watch-dog at the famous W. H. Kendrick pheasantries in that city, although trained to hunt birds, has become so attached to the young pheasants that she cares for and mothers them most affectionately. The dog watches over the birds with the utmost fidelity. Any disturbance or trespassing, by night or day, which could in any way interfere with the pheasants is reported by Queenie's loud barking. By the tone of her bark the keepers think that they can pretty nearly tell what she means. At night she gives the alarm when anybody passes the grounds, and if she thinks it is important she insists on waking the gamekeepers who act as night watchmen when occasion requires it.—Leslie's.

Rather a Wet Day.

The province of Orissa, on the eastern coast of Hindustan, usually has in the course of a year forty-six inches of rain, or only a little more than the annual average for New York City. The Bay of Bengal, on which it faces, is subject to extraordinary storms, however, and these are often marked by deluges of rain, as well as destructive gales. An unprecedented downpour is said to have occurred there one day in August last, the precipitation amounting to twelve inches—11.95 inches, to be exact—in twenty-four hours. This visitation, it will be seen, gave Orissa one-quarter as much water as she generally gets in twelve months.

Cars Run by Man Power.

Street railways with cars operated by manual power are in use at Mombasa, in East Africa. The light, narrow gauge tracks are laid through the street, and the cars are for hire, like cabs, or are the private property of officials and wealthy residents. They are little four-wheeled cars, with one or two cross seats, and each is propelled by two natives. Spur tracks are run into private grounds, so that persons can take the cars to their doors.—Philadelphia Record.

HER GOOD FORTUNE

After Years Spent in Vain Effort.

Mrs. Mary E. H. Rouse, of Cambridge, N. Y., says: "Five years ago I had a bad fall and it affected my kidneys. Severe pains in my back and hips became constant, and sharp twinges followed any exertion. The kidney secretions were badly disordered. I lost flesh and grew too weak to work. Though constantly using medicine I despaired of being cured until I began taking Doan's Kidney Pills. Then relief came completely, and in a short time I was completely cured. I am now in excellent health."

Tricked of the Time.

A Philadelphia lawyer, who spends most of his time at his country estate, employs a sturdy Irish gardener whose one desire in life is to live until the banner of freedom is unfurled over Ireland.

One evening the lawyer strolled through the grounds of his place and stopped to have a chat with the gardener.

"Michael, do you know that while we are here enjoying the beautiful twilight it is dark in night in Ireland?" he asked.

"Faith, an 'O'm not surprised," replied the gardener. "Ireland never got justice yet!"—Judge.

Hog Cholera.

The greatest drawback to the hog industry, which breeders in this country have to contend with is what is known as "hog cholera" and "swine plague."

Hog cholera is a highly contagious disease and unless checked is liable to carry off a great number of hogs in a very short time.

Mr. A. P. Williams of Burnetts Creek, Ind., tells of an experience which he had with some hogs that had the cholera. "Five years ago," says Mr. Williams, "I was in the employ of Mr. J. D. Richardson, Lafayette, Ind., as his barn foreman. Some fine hogs that I was feeding took the cholera. I gave them Sloan's Lintiment and did not lose a hog. Some were so bad they would not drink sweet milk and I was compelled to dress them. I have tried it at every opportunity since and always find it O. K."

CURED HER THREE CHILDREN.

Girls Suffered with Itching Eczema—Baby Had a Tender Skin, Too—Relieved on Cuticura Remedies.

"Some years ago my three little girls had a very bad form of eczema. Itching eruptions formed on the backs of their heads which were simply covered. I tried almost everything, but failed. Then my mother recommended the Cuticura Remedies. I washed my children's heads with Cuticura soap and then applied the wonderful ointment, Cuticura. I did this four or five times and I can say that they have been entirely cured. I have another baby who is so plump that the folds of skin on his neck were broken and even bled. I used Cuticura Soap and Cuticura Ointment and the next morning the trouble had disappeared. Mme. Napoleon Duceppe, 41 Du-luth St., Montreal, Que., May 21, 1907."

Naming the Zones.

The semiannual examinations were held at a well-known upper West Side private school the other day, and while inspecting the papers the teachers found many numerous answers to some of the questions. A class of boys averaged about twelve years of age had been examined in geography, which had preceded the day before by grammar.

Among the questions in the geography paper was the following:

"Name the zones."

One promising youth of eleven years wrote this answer:

"There are two zones, masculine and feminine. The masculine is either temperate or interperate; the feminine is either torrid or frigid."—New York Sun.
