Thirty five school districts in the State out of 2,570 have not received their appropriation from the State for the maintenance of schools and they may not unless they comply with the compulsory education and other laws. In most instances the districts have not received their money because their officials have failed to send in the reports and affidavits that the proper salaries have been paid, but in others the appropriations have been held up because the compulsory education law was not enforced.

OCTOBER COURT.

tried was that of Frank Sprowl vs. the Chambersburg and Bedford Turnpike Road Company which was taken up Thursday morning. This was an action brought by Frank Sprowl for damages sustained by reason of his having been thrown from a buggy July 1, 1907 on the turnpike leading up Siding Hill mountain west of Saluvia. The facts developed were substantially as follows: The defendant company was making repairs to its road about a mile west of Saluvia. These repairs were being made by filling gutters cut in the pike by traction engines. Defendant had placed along the pike piles of stones, and at one place in the road, for something over a rod, stones which had been gathered from the mountain and were, in some cases as large as a gallon bucket, and others were as large as two men could well handle. On the afternoon of July 1, 1907, Frank Sprowl, accompanied by Frank McDaniel, was driving eastward down the mountain in an open or "runabout" buggy. They arrived at the point where the stones had been placed in and along the pike about 4 o'clock in the afternoon. Men employed by the defendant company were breaking, putting in, and covering the stones. The stones extended along the pike for, perhaps, 200 or more feet. The men were working at the west end. The horse, which was driven by Mr. McDaniel, passed the men at work quietly, but became frightened when he got upon larger and unbroken stones, and started to run down the mountain, shying at the piles of stone along the pike, running the buggy over a pile near the edge of the pike, throwing Sprowl and McDaniel over the embankment, the buggy falling on top of Sprowl and pinning him to the ground. The horse became detached and ran down through the woods and came out on the pike some distance below. The workmen hastened to the scene of the accident, and Mr. McDaniel, who had been more fortunate than his companion, pursued and caught the horse. The workmen liberated Mr. Sprowl from his position under the buggy, and carried him up on to the pike, and later sent him by the western stage down to the home of a Mr. Deshong where Mr. Sprowl had been boarding while in the employ of Wilson McDaniel, where he remained confined to his room for two weeks. The morning following, his family physician at Everett came to see him, and found that two ribs had been torn from the spinal column, and that he sustained other injuries. Mr. Sprowl afterward brought suit against the turnpike company to recover the sum of $2000. The jury, after mature deliberation, returned a verdict for $1,220 in favor of Mr. Sprowl as follows: bill at Deshong's, $15; Doctor's bill, $30; loss of time from labor, $175, and $1,000 for pain and suffering.
