To Abolish the Office.

There is talk of introducing a bill at the present session of the legislature to abolish the office of associate judge. The advocates of the measure claim the judicial districts have been cut down now so that the president judge can well take care of all the business, and there is no longer any need for associate judges. Last year they cost the state some $26,000 for twenty counties, and while this is not a large sum, the abuse of the functions of the associate judge in granting licenses over the head of the president judge, the overruling of the president judge in granting or refusing new trials, regardless of the merits of the case, are matters that some times cause the courts of justice to be regarded as courts of injustice. Associate judges have a vote on all such questions, and as there are two, they can overrule the president judge. One of the advocates of the repeal measure is George W. Wagenseller, editor of the Middleburg Post, of Snyder county, who says:

"The unwise and unjust rulings of associate judges have brought the courts into disrepute and engender a disrespect for judicial authority that can be effaced only by the abolishment of the office. If only men of dignity and honor would aspire and attain to these positions, there would be little occasion to regret the existence of secondary judicial honors. It frequently occurs that associate judges are men of profane and intemperate habits. I have learned of one or two counties in the state where the associate judges were and are a source of dignity to the court and a credit to the judicial toga, but beyond that they performed no function that could not have been performed better and at a great deal less expense by the clerk of the courts."

As far as Fulton county is concerned, the character of our associate judges is beyond reproach.

The Trans-State Highway.

The proposed public highway across the State, from Philadelphia via Harrisburg to Pittsburg, is being considerably discussed throughout the State and an effort will be made to have the Legislature pass a bill during the present session appropriating funds for the building of the road. The Legislature of course will be asked to appropriate sums of money for various purposes such as public schools, public roads, hospitals and other institutions throughout the State, which will exhaust the State's resources, and no doubt many of our law makers will differ in opinions as to the best and most practical way to provide funds for the building of the proposed public highway across the State. Some say tax coal. Others say to advance the tax on corporations. Some too will insist on an income tax while still others will suggest different methods.

The best, and in our judgment the only proper way to build the road, would be to issue a series of bonds maturing in fifteen or twenty years, a certain amount falling due each year. These bonds can be floated at a very low rate of interest, and therefore, not in any way interfere with the present system of taxation. Make the appropriation for the building of the road. Make the moneys secure the right of way, and when all is in readiness, let the entire road be built. Let thirty or more different contractors take hold, build a stretch twelve or more miles long each. In this way the entire road could be built within one year from date of starting. Let the road be built and as speedily as possible.—Mount Union Times.

Safeguarding Marriage.

Safeguarding marriage is wise. Five States already have statutes endeavoring to prevent marriage between those whose condition renders a union unwise. Some of these laws forbid a marriage license without a doctor's certificate of sound health.

The bill introduced by Representative H. A. McClung at Harrisburg prohibiting marriage to those with tuberculosis, epilepsy and other hereditary diseases has precedent. It moves in the right direction. The State and the family, the public and the individual, are alike interested in safe marriages between sound men and women.

But the appropriate restriction is not with reference to "hereditary" diseases, but "transmissible" diseases. A disease may be "transmissible" either by descent or by contact. Tuberculosis, it is almost certain, is not hereditary; but it is now certain that it is infectious by contact. Epilepsy is probably hereditary, but is not communicable by contact.

"Transmissible" covers both these cases. It applies both to maladies which are contagious or infectious and to those which are hereditary. The law should recognize this peril, and no license to marry should be issued to those known to have "transmissible" diseases.—The Press.

Didn't Suit Washington.

Until the early part of the last century Milford, Conn., had a house in which Washington was said to have spent a night. It was in 1789, when Washington made a tour of New-England. Tradition says that there were certain things about his stay at the Milford tavern which he did not enjoy. The supper set before him consisted of boiled meat and potatoes. He was not pleased with the meal and asked for a bowl of bread and milk. The landlord brought the new order and a brook on pewter spoon with which to eat it.

"Have you no better spoon than this?" asked General Washington.

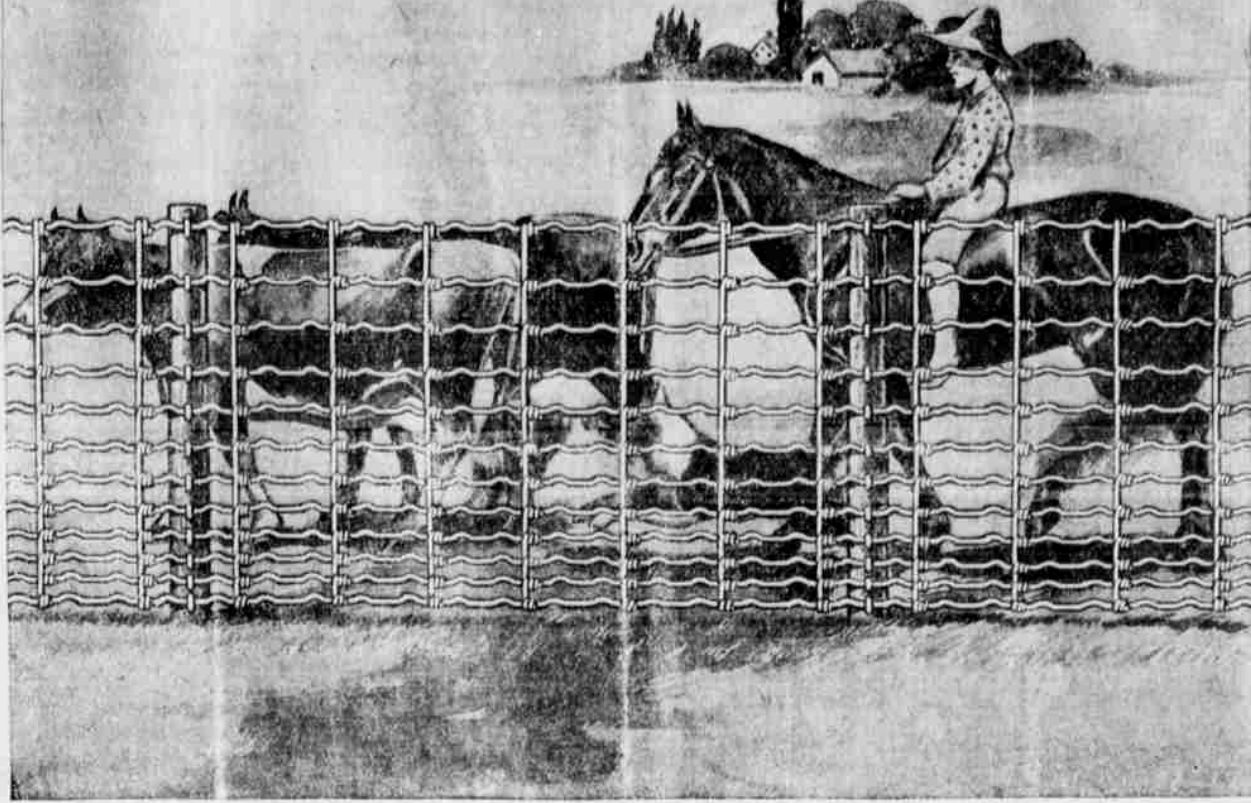

"It's the best I have in the house, sir," replied the host. "Send me the servant," said his excellency. "Here's 2 shillings. Go to the minister's and borrow a silver spoon."

Tradition does not add whether he got the spoon or not.—Exchange.
