delivered his Inaugural Address which is, in part, as follows:

My Fellow Citizens: Any one who takes the oath I have just taken must feel a heavy weight of responsibility. If not, he has no conception of the powers and duties of the office upon which he is about to enter, or he is lacking in a proper sense of the obligation which the oath imposes.

The office of an Inaugural Address is to give a summary outline of the main policies of the new administration, so far as they can be anticipated. I have had the honor to be one of the advisers of my distinguished predecessor, and as such, to hold up his hands in the reforms he has initiated. I should be untrue to myself, to my promises and to the declarations of the party platform upon which I was elected to office, if I did not make the maintenance and enforcement of those reforms a most important feature of my administration. They were directed to the suppression of the lawlessness and abuses of power of the great combinations of capital invested in railroads and in industrial enterprises carrying on interstate commerce. The steps which my predecessor took and the legislation passed on his recommendation have accomplished much, have caused a general halt in the vicious policies which created popular alarm, and have brought about in the business affected a much higher regard for existing law. To render the reforms lasting, however, and to secure at the same time freeders from alarm on the part of those pursuing proper and progressive business methods, further legislative and executive action are needed. Relief of the railroads from certain restrictions of the anti-trust law have been urged by my predecessor and will be urged by me. On the other hand, the administration is pledged to legislation looking to a proper federal supervision and restriction to prevent excessive issess of bonds and stocks by companies owning and operating interstate commerce railroads.

Mr. Taft expresses the belief that reorganization of the Department Justice, of the Bureau of Corporations in the Department of Commerce and Labor, and of the Interstate Com-merce Commission, is needed to secure a more rapid enforcement of the laws affecting interstate railroads and industrial combinations.

He says he hones to submit, at the first regular session of the incoming Congress, in December next, definite suggestions in respect to the needed amendments to the anti-trust and the interstate commerce law.

It is believed, the Address continues, that with the changes to be recommended, American business can be assured of that measure of stability and certainty in respect to those things that may be done and those that are prohibited, which is essential to the life and growth of all business. Such a plan must in-clude the right of the people to avail themselves of those methods of comtent of creating monopolies and artificially controlling prices. I believe are just as necessary in the protection of legitimate business as in the clinching of the reforms which properly bear the name of my predecessor On the subject of tariff revision Mr Taft says: A matter of most pressing importance is the revision of the In accordance with the prommay be at once given to a bill revis-ing the Dingley Act. This should secure an adequate revenue and adjust the duties in such a manner as to mine or factory, protection by tariff equal to the difference between the cost of production abroad and the cost of production here, and have a provision which shall put into force, executive determination of certain facts, a higher or maximum tariff against those countries whose trade policy toward us equitably requires ch discrimination. The President believes there can safely be a reduction in certain sched-ules while advancement will be required in few, if any. The proposed revision disturbs the whole business of the country; therefore, it is neces-sary that the bill be drawn in good faith and as promptly as possible. Mr. Taft because of this urges that no other legislation be considered at the extra session. The President states that the revision of this tariff is for the purpose of raising sufficient revenue to wipe out the year's $100,000,000 dencit. Should it be impossible to do so by import duties, new kinds of taxation it is suggested now that a five-mile run be added to the intercollegiate games program, but the suggestion involves dropping the hammer throw, which rather coppers it.

Mr. Taft says he stands for economy in expenditures but not to an extent that will stop effective government. There must be liberal ex-penditures for the Department of Agriculture, the supervision of rall-ways and industrial corporations, and Amendment due process of law, prothe putting of laws in force that will conserve our resources.

One of the reforms to be carried out during the incoming Administra-ton, declares Mr. Taft, is a change of our monetary and banking laws, as to secure greater elasticity in the orms of currency available for trade and the incoming Congress should cromptly fulfill the promise of the Republican platform and pass a chises by those of the negro race who proper Postal Savings Bank bill.
