The Woman's Social and Political Union, one of the militant suf-frage societies in England, has just brought out its annual report. This shows a remarkable growth during the last year. The union in one year has increased its office staff from 30 persons to 75, and the space occupied by its London headquarters from 13 rooms to 19, besides estabishing branch offices in 11 other cities. Its receipts from the sale of literature have grown from $3,000 in the previous year to $10,000, and its annual income from $20,000 to $100,000. The circulation of its newspaper, Votes for Women, has grown from 5.000 a month to 20,000 a week. And the Woman's Social and Political Union is only one of half dozen women suffrage societies in England, all actively at work,

The fact that it has sold $10,000 worth of its literture during the last year is especially significant. The recent annual report of the New York State Association Opposed to Woman Suffrage shows that during the whole year it sold only $31.90 worth of literature.—Alice Stone Blackwell in New York Sun.

KAISER PHONES PECULIARLY.

The German Emperor has his own way of using the telephone. Despite mistakes, caused by the Kaiser's re-fusal to name himself at the open-ing of his conversation, he invariably introduces his telephoned orders merely with the words: "I command that," and so forth. As soon as the chief department hears these words he motions that his subordinates must at once leave the room. The significance of this arrangement is supposed to be that the chief is hav-ing something like an audience with ing something like an audience with His Majesty, and that it would be presumptuous for a person not sum-moned to hear the Imperial voice to moned to hear the Imperial voice to occupy the room into which its tones are conveyed. At the end of the conversation the Emperor walks away without saying "good-by," and the chief with whom he has conversed must listen for five or six minutes afterward to make sure that orders have been completed. Then he calls back his assistants and the usual etiquet is resumed.
