A story is told of a married lady who compared her husband to a handsome piano lamp that he had presented to her. Her husband felt quite flattered until she mentioned the particulars of the resemblance. "Well," she said, "you know my dear, it has a good deal of brass about it, it is handsome to look at, it is not remarkably brilliant, requires a good deal of attention, is sometimes unsteady on its legs, liable to explode when half full, flares up occasionally, is always out at bedtime, and is bound to smoke."

Children especially like Kennedy's Laxative Cough Syrup, as it tastes nearly as good as maple sugar. It not only heals irritation and allays inflammation, thereby stopping the cough, but it also moves the bowels gently and in that way drives the cold from the system. It contains no opiates. Sold by Trout's drug store.

Resolutions of Respect.

At a regular meeting of Wells Castle No. 350 K. G. E., April 24, 1909, the following preamble and resolutions were unanimously adopted: We, the members of Wells Castle, by our committee, hereby express our feelings in the following:

WHEREAS, We fully realize the teachings of our Order, the uncertainty of life and the certainty of death, we are most forcibly reminded of this great truth in the death of Felix Theys, who was killed April 1, 1909. Therefore be it

Resolved, That we hereby renew our vows to one another and to our Order, in hope that we may live closer to each other in the practice of Fidelity, Valor, and Honor.

Resolved, That in his death the Castle has lost a worthy member, and when we look upon his vacant chair, we are impressed with the thought that it is his gain and our loss.

Resolved, That the most profound sympathy of this Castle be hereby extended to his invalid wife and children.

Resolved, That the charter of the Castle be draped for a period of thirty days in remembrance of our deceased Brother, and to remind us that we too may soon be called to that bourne from which no traveler has ever returned.

The New Spring Hat.

Fashion decrees that the cool scuttle and umbrella hats are to be the thing this year. It is all off with the broad, straight brim. Women will not be in style unless they bury their faces beneath a bucket trimmed with fruit. Yes, fruit is in style for trimming hats.

Here is a simple recipe for making a stylish bonnet:

Take one perfectly good wire waste basket. Weave in and out of the wire 24 yards of pink ribbon, 16 yards of orange chiffon, 42 yards of lavender lace, 11 yards of red calico, a mother Hubbard, a bath robe and a kimona. Then repair to a grocery store and a meat market and buy all they have in sight. Stick a pineapple jauntily over the left ear, and underneath the brim on the same side sew two turnips and the half of a grape fruit. At the back hang a few strawberries and a couple of buckwheat cakes. On top, a bunch of bananas is always au fait. In front it is well to pile what is left over; pork chops and wiener wursts make a particularly fetching front. Peanuts hung around the edge of the hat provide a neat border.

Chest Development.

Both health and good looks depend upon the development of the chest. For if the chest is not properly developed, it means that the lungs are cramped and that the air does not nor cannot enter them sufficiently. The chest depends for its correct position upon the general carriage of the body. The shoulders, which have a general tendency to push forward, should be squared and kept in position. They should be held well back and the chest carried forward and outward, as if supporting an imaginary rosette on the most prominent part. The position is best attained by thrusting a cane or a stick through the elbows as the arms are doubled up close to the sides: the cane at the back holds the shoulders in position. Take long and deep breaths at the same time. These exercises practiced night and morning will give a chest expansion in a very little while. The amount of development thus obtained can be gauged by measuring the chest with a tape-measure once a week, being careful to place it in exactly the same position each time. It should pass above the breasts and just under the arms.

The exercise which I have often described, which will also develop the chest most admirably, is performed by doubling the fists tightly and placing them on the chest, at the same time bringing the doubled up arms in a perfectly horizontal position. Then slowly separate the fists and bring the elbows back as far as possible. This exercise not only develops the muscles of the chest but it has great influence on those of the back as well. STARTING THE NEW HOME RIGHT.

A Timely and Interesting Talk to the Young Married Couples.

The excitement of the wedding is over—the new home has been selected and furnished, and the newly made husband and wife draw a long breath of satisfaction and relief that at last they are "settled." They look about the cozy home and their hearts swell with pride that it is all theirs—their very own. Surely they can want nothing more to make them perfectly happy. They have each other, they have their home and a comfortable salary to maintain it. They have their friends—what more could mortal wish for! There is, however, one other thing that they do need or the time will surely come when this happy family in their comfortable home will not be able to weather the storms of life.

When we are happy we do not like to look ahead for trouble, nor do we need to do so. That would mar our happiness—all that is necessary is to take the history of every man or woman that ever lived and it will show that life is made up of both storm and sunshine. The storm does not bother us much, however, if we are safely housed and warm, and there is nothing that can secure us from the storms of life like a bank account.

True love will stand the test of many troubles, but if the time comes when illness or financial disaster cuts off the income, then a bank account, however small, is the rudder that guides love through the storm.

Young husband, young wife, get your pencil and paper and figure up the exact amount of your weekly or monthly income, then first of all, set aside a certain sum to be saved every month, and live on the balance. Get in the habit of feeling that this amount must be saved; regard it as taxes, for you know that taxes must be paid, or the property will be lost. Just so it is worth your saving. If you do not save, the time will come when your home will go to pay doctors' bills to tide over the financial strait, or for one of the many difficulties that come to all people at some time during their natural life. Do not think you will be exempt from trouble. It is not in accordance with the great plan of the universe that anyone should have all sunshine. If however, you have a bank account you can meet the trouble bravely and try again with renewed vigor.

Why not start the new life in "double harness" on a practical business like basis—young man be frank with your wife; tell her exactly how much your salary is and ask her to help you save a certain sum each month, so that when old age comes, you may sit together and rest in comfort, after your many years of labor. You will find her eager to help you, and soon you will both have the saving habit. Give her her own savings account and each day she will find new ways to save and will take pride in showing you at the end of the month how her account has grown.

I do not mean to advise doing without all pleasures simply to accumulate money. My motto is "Do all things in moderation." Enjoy yourself as you go through life, but keep a constant eye on the inevitable old age, which none of us can escape, and see that you save enough to insure comfort and ease for that time.

Don't put off starting your savings account—do it at once, and by next year this time you will have an account to be proud of.
