

THE OLD DOLL.

Little one, little one, open your arms, Now are your wishes come true, come true!

JACKSON'S RACE FOR THE YELLOWSTONE.

By ROBERT DORRIMAN.

In those days—it was in the year 1806—whiskey was the great factor of the Indian trade, in spite of the fact that Congress making its laws, or even its importation into the Indian country, illegal. In one way or another it was smuggled past the inspectors to the various posts, where it was doled out to the trappers, red and white, at fabulous prices.

trust to the word of a chief," and he walked away without a backward look.
He had plenty of backward-flying thoughts, however. Would the Blackfoot repay good with evil?
How near was the band for which he had been scouting? Would they be down on his trail the next day? Worried by these thoughts Jackson traveled fast all that night, and spent the next day hidden in a cup-like hollow on the summit of a small butte, a position which, defended by his long rifle, would have cost the Blackfoot dear to take.

Why He Lost His Friends.

He was always wounding their feelings, making sarcastic or funny remarks at their expense.
He was cold and reserved in his manner, cranky, gloomy, pessimistic.
He did not realize that friendship will not thrive on sentiment alone; that there must be service to nourish it.

eat in the shade of a bluff on the Yellowstone River. Jackson and the scout posted on top of the bank saw each other at the same instant, and the trapper halted just long enough to make sure that the odds against him were too big to warrant any show of resistance. Then he took to his heels, running, quartering away from the river.

ward the heart of the jam just as the leading Blackfoot leaped down the bank. For a few moments they stood there, talking in low tones; then Jackson heard the water ripple and splash as they waded out toward the jam.

When your companion is out of sort, either be quiet or say something that will call his attention to the brighter side of the circumstances.
Be more loving, more tender and more sympathetic, and mean it. Be calm and bright yourself, and go about your work as if all was right.

ered. The young men in the university had great fun over the slip, but the girls were not a bit pleased.

Can't Bear Arms.
Many people hold that the inability of women to "bear arms" is a conclusive argument against female suffrage. A certain individual asks if it has been proved that women cannot defend their country as soldiers. He has observed that in fiction the girl who masquerades as a fighting man, however bold she may be in words, proves to be an arrant little coward when she feels a sword or pistol in her hand and sees another threatening her. But he has read history as well as fiction, and asserts that some of the women who, disguising their sex, have actually served for years in the army, have been distinguished for bravery and martial qualities.—New York Tribune.

Be Cheerful.
When your companion is out of
brighter side of the circumstances.
about your work as if all was right.

Golden Threads.
"Do you intend to have a transformation made, that you preserve all your golden threads so carefully?"
"No, I'm not going to have anything made," answered the woman addressed, who had been brushing her hair and was now removing every strand of hair from her brush and putting it into an envelope, "and it's very likely these golden threads, as you are pleased to call them, will before long be consigned to the flames. But I was once so foolish as to let about half of my hair fall out. After I began a course of treatment with a scalp specialist I kept the combings of each week in a separate envelope, and compared them from time to time to see what effect the treatment was having. My hair is as thick as ever now, but I still keep up my watchfulness to be sure it's not falling abnormally without my knowing it. It takes so long for hair to grow if you once lose it that it's much wiser not to lose it." —New York Tribune.

On Wedding Invitations.
For a large church wedding invitanames are on the visiting lists of the necessary.—New York Tribune.

Warns Girls Against Chinese.
Mrs. Radford, eighty-seven years old, has been superintendent of a Chinese mission in New Orleans for twenty-five years. The mission has a Sunday school and evening classes had the opportunity to observe many hundreds of Chinese, and she is rigidly opposed to their being instructed in any way by white women or girls.

She has no patience with the woman
