German Household Economy. The American consul at Nuremberg reports on an interesting statistical study of household economy in Germany. In the report considered the government took into account 852 families, the heads of which were asked to keep a careful account of the wage income from all sources and the outgo for the period covered by the study.

The total annual income was $444,501, and the total expenditures $453,005, leaving a deficit of more than $8,000 at the end of the year For skilled industrial workmen the annual average income in Germany, among the families considered. was found to be $448. The average income for all the families in the reckoning was $521.70, while average expenditures amounted to $531.

69, which left each family owing approximately $10 at the end of the year.
When it is considered that these averages may be accepted as the averages for the better class of wage. earners in Germany it would seem that, so far as the matter of comparison is concerned, the average American wage-earner, whether skilled or unskilled, has little about which to complain. The showing in Germany is more remarkable on account of the difference between earnings and expenditures, and suggests the need of larger incomes or greater economy in household affairs, else wage-earners in Germany will soon find themselves burdened by a growing debt which they cannot hope to overtake. Consul Louis Hostetter, of Hermosilli, reports that the Sonora Railroad is experimenting with a gasoline motor car which was made at Omaha, Neb.
