CULL BEANS.

Their Value as a Feed For Young Pigs

and For Sheep. Beans are a very important agricultural crop in Michigan, the total crop ranging between 1,500,000 and 5,000,-000 bushels per year. It has been estimated that from 5 to 10 per cent of the total crop consists of culls or damaged beans, the proportion being influenced by the peculiarities of the season and weather conditions at the time of harvest. Of these cull beans about onehalf are probably used for feeding pur-

Fed to Cows and Swine. R. S. Shaw and A. C. Anderson of the Michigan experiment station, who have recently studied the value of cull beans as a feed for young pigs and for fattening pigs, state:

Mixed with other grains, cull beans mny be fed to sheep, and large quantities are used in this state for this purpose each year. It is reported that they are used as a food for dairy cows. They are also fed to swine.

It is not desired to advocate the extensive use of beans as a swine food. especially in the fattening or finishing period. Pork from bogs which have been fattened quite largely on beans is generally soft and lacking in quality. If a considerable portion of the pork produced in the state were of this kind it would lower prices and work serious harm to the swine industry. It is generally conceded that bean fed hogs store up a fat having a lower meiting point, and consequently a softer fat, than hogs fed upon many other feeds and that a considerable portion of the element called quality in pork is dependent upon the melting point or character of the fat stored up

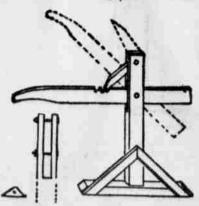

In the case of mutton finished upon beans no such criticism has been made, probably because there is relatively less fat in the careass of the sheep and its character is it so essential to the quality of the meat as in the case of

Two Ways of Cooking. In the Michigan experiments the cull beans used were cooked in two waysthe one by injecting live steam into a barrel containing the food to be cooked, the other by the use of the ordinary feed cooker, consisting of a caldron kettle, with a cast fron stove as a jacket for the same. A large variety of cookers of similar sorts are upon the market. In cooking small amounts the kettle gave the better results, while the steam was more convenient for larger quantities.

Keeping Squashes. The best luck I ever had storing squashes and pumpkins was in a cellar adjoining a furnace room, says a writer in Orange Judd Farmer. It was very dry, and the windows were all kept open until there was danger of frost entering the cellar. The squashes were gathered just before frost without bruising, care being taken to leave all the stems on. They were set upon shelves about four feet up from the cellar floor. The windows were left open for awhile every warm day during winter to air the cellar. The cellar was kept dry and cool. These squashes kept nicely until Jan. 1: then some of them began to speck. When I wanted one to use I looked them over and used the ones that were beginning to show signs of not keeping very well. By this method none went to waste. A number of them kept until spring. The squashes were the Hubbard, the Hester and the Marlow. There was a fine lot of them, and I do not know that our famed the Bridenstine sale last Thurs ily ever enjoyed anything better than they did those squashes. The Hester Rev. Collins, of Orbisonia, squash especially is a fine keeper and if cooked right is equal to sweet pota-

There is no excuse for straining your back or offering the hired man an oc casion to quit because of having to lift wagons and other farm implements with a rail and main strength when you can easily make in an hour a substantial jack such as shown in the cut from "pick up" pleces that are now lying idle, possibly in the scrap pile. The upright may be 3 by 4 or 4 by 4 inch stuff of such length as will allow the handle or lever to rest a little above the axle level of your highest wagon. This upright is cut into with a rip saw, as shown in the sectional drawing, to admit the lever and the lock bar that holds the handle in place after the wheel is raised. Holes are bored, and two bolts are inserted to hold the lever and lock.

The base should be five or six inches wide and twenty inches or two feet fong and well braced to the upright from either side, as shown.-Farm and Fireside.

Forehanded Boys.

It is perhaps not true that in St. Louis when the noon whistle blew a carpenter nailing shingles on a roof left his hammer suspended in the air at the upper end of a stroke and went to lunch, but Search Light vouches for the following, which is along the same line:

While the American Library association was in session a number of members went to inspect a cotton mill. They were in the card room when the whistle blew for noon and saw the card room boys put up their work as if by magic and disappear.
"Do all the boys drop their tools the instant the whistle blows?" asked one of the visitors. "No, not all," replied the fore-man. "The more orderly have their tools all put away before that time."
