The Iniquity of Prices.

Few things could be more expressive of the feelings of the people's purse than the rapid extension of the meat boycott, so called. Last week it was announced that many thousands of Cleveland workmen and their families had pledged themselves not to eat meat for a week in order, primarily, to bring down the price of meat and to ascertain just how well they could get along without it—whether it was not more or less of a luxury. The week is not yet passed, yet we are told that the workmen of Pittsburg intend to institute "one of the most formidable movements ever launched against the meat packers in this country"; that the people of Omaha, or a good many of them, are going to stop eating meat; that the Milwaukee federated unions, including a total membership of nearly twenty thousand are going to establish a meat boycott; that St. Louis has organized a "pioneer anti-carnivora society" and that workers in Waterbury, Conn., are starting a similar boycott against butter.

Such a movement has its amusing side, but it also has its serious one, as any psychologist of the crowd would know. Meat prices may or they may not come down here and there as the result of the boycott; but ideas will tend to become definite, the abstract to become concrete, and whoever and whatever causes or seem to cause the higher cost of living will be outlawed everywhere. A shibboleth of greater efficacy than any the country has known for many years is in the making. Does the politician wish to attack the trusts, the tariff, the gold supply, the forestalling of traders, the demands of labor organizations, the extravagance of high livers, or the exhaustion of national resources? All that he will need to do will be to charge the object of his attack with the increased cost of living. He can strike it no more sayage blow.

Until now it has seemed more or less excusable to raise prices of various products and services, the argument being that it costs more than it did to produce them. The other day, when the architects raised their commission charge from 5 to 6 per cent, they explained that it was in large part due to the high cost of living; they had to pay higher salaries for assistance, etc. The justification seemed sufficient. But let whoever contemplates the increase of prices in the future look out how he explains his action. No such excuse should be given. Indeed, no excuse occurs to us that is likely to be tolerated. When once the public begins to boycott prices the raising thereof is conclusive evidence of origin al sin and everlasting iniquity, and no mercy will be felt for any one who offends. Pity the poor railroads and others who have not yet got into the game. All who have been laggards—whether from tenderness for the common weal, from neglect of opportunity or because of the constraint of business conditions—will feel the hand of the price boycott resting heavy on their heels. To-day they are late. To-morrow the gates will be closed to them.—The Globe.

Public Benefactions.

The honor roll of wealthy men who have bequeathed or contributed large sums of money to public and private charities or to educational institutions has been greatly in evidence during the year just closed. The aggregate amount of these benefactions for 1909 is nearly $135,000,000, and shows an increase over those of 1908 of about $75,000,000. Among these public-spirited benefactors of their kind the late John Stewart Kennedy takes first rank, his bequests amounting to $30,000,000.

Next to Mr. Kennedy, comes John D. Rockefeller, whose benefactions for the year reached the amount of $13,702,000.

Next in order comes Andrew Carnegie, who contributed the sum of $6,392,686, of which $2,000,000 was given to erect and equip a School of Applied Science in Pittsburg.

The widow of the late Christopher L. Magee died during 1909 and a fund of $5,000,000 under Mr. Magee's will, reverted to the city of Pittsburg for the purpose of founding a women's hospital. James Milliken, of Decatur, Ill., left $2,400,000 to his native city for the benefit of hospitals and other local institutions, and Mrs. Russell Sage's donations for the year reached the sum of $1,965,000. Within a few days past the announcement has been made of the death of Thomas Murdoch, of Chicago, of whose estate of probably $3,500,000, the American Sunday School Union of this city receives about $500,000.

The honor roll is long and cannot be given in full, but in all parts of our country these benefactions have been received by worthy and needy institutions, and the amount of good that has been done is beyond calculation.

These noble men and women have acted as wise stewards of the vast wealth with which they have been blessed, and in thus doing have proven their wisdom in distributing as they have proven their genius and energy in gathering. Every institution that has felt the powerful influence of their needed help will go forward to greater achievement and the never-ceasing power of this money, wisely bestowed, will be of inestimable aid in the development of their high aims and purposes.—Philadelphia Press.

Valuable Booklet.

"One of the most valuable booklets that has ever come to our notice is being issued for free distribution by the Waverly Oil Works Co., of Pittsburg, Pa. This booklet contains 100 pages, and in addition to telling all about oils of every kind, it has about 70 pages devoted to tables and matters of general information, much of which is entirely new.

It is of considerable value to engineers and mechanics, and one of these booklets should be on the desk of every business man.

A postal card request addressed to the Waverly Oil Works Co., at Pittsburg, Pa., will bring one of the books promptly."

He Lost the Bet.

An Irish waiter named Kenny was noted for his wit and ready answers. A party of gentlemen, who were staying at the hotel, heard of Kenny's wit, and one of them made a bet that he would say something that Kenny could not answer at once.

A bottle of champagne was ordered. The one who had made the bet took hold of the bottle and commenced to open it. The cork came out with a "bang" and flew in Kenny's mouth.

"Ah," he said, "that is not the way to cork!" Kenny took the cork out of his mouth and replied: "No; but it's the way to Kill-Kenny."

WEBSTER MILLS.

Leonard Bivens entertained quite a crowd of young people very pleasantly at his home last Friday evening.

John Hann returned home last Wednesday evening, after having spent a week very pleasantly at Greencastle.

Harry Duffey was among those who suffered from the flood of last Friday. His mill dam was badly washed out.

An Explanation.

Hustontown. — Mr. Editor:—That article sent to you on that sleigh riding joy party, by the accidental change of words, was made to convey an entirely different meaning from that intended by your correspondent. It was merely a friendly satire on stealing our girls. The impress all the way through was that of kidnapping. As it came out in your paper it made the impression that there was rowdiness and cruelty to animals. The young people of Hustontown are not angels, but the moral standard is much higher than that of many other communities. You see no drunkenness, lewdness, or immorality. You hear but little profanity and vulgarity. In fact, there are no more well behaved, moral and courteous young people than those of Hustontown. The only sin they committed was in going at the time they did. We should give the Lord, at least, one day out of the week, yet how many older heads are constantly making the Lord's day a day of visiting or selfish enjoyment, thus robbing God of his time and hindering his cause. "Z."

LOCAL HEROISM.

Ex-Commissioner Plunges into Icy Flood to Rescue Drowning Schoolboy. Brings Him Safely to Land.

But for the quick action and heroism of Ex-Commissioner S. C. Gracey, we might now be writing up the sad death of a promising little schoolboy, and telling of another home saddened by the loss of a loved child.

The heavy rain of last Friday morning upon the frozen icy ground caused an unusually rapid rise in the streams of the county. George the little son of Isaac McClain, of Taylor township, had gone to school Friday morning as usual, but during the day the mother became very uneasy for the safety of her child who had a stream to cross on his way home; and the bridge not any too safe.

To quiet her apprehensions, Mr. Gracey volunteered to see that the boy got across the bridge all right. After getting the boy well started across the stream, and the boy assuring him that he was not afraid, Mr. Gracey awaited results. The lad had but little more than reached the middle of the stream, when he lost his nerve, became dizzy, and in a twinkling, was in the surging waters rapidly disappearing down the stream. Mr. Gracey's only thought was for the safety of the child, and rushing into the flood, it was with the greatest effort that he succeeded in bringing the boy out—for it is a wonder that both were not drowned.

While Andy is passing around medals for heroism, he might send a good sized one by registered mail to Gracey postoffice.

Making Life Safer.

Everywhere life is being made more safe through the work of Dr. King's New Life Pills in constipation, biliousness, dyspepsia, indigestion, liver troubles, kidney diseases and bowel disorders. They're easy, but sure, and perfectly build up the health. 25c. at Trout's drug store.

Origin of the Name "Bloodhound."

The bloodhound was first known in England as the sleuthhound, later as the English bloodhound; not on account of his thirst for blood, but because of his pure breeding, the same as one speaks of a pure-bred, pure-blood or blooded horse. He was first introduced in England by that good sportsman William the Conqueror. Later he was known in France as the St. Hubert, and in the eighth century as the Flemish hound. There were no real English bloodhounds in America before those sent over by Edwin Brought to the New York dog show in 1888. The registration of the American Kennel Club shows that they were the first imported and the first ever registered.—Recreation, for December.

Austin Carbaugh, of Franklin county, came over the mountain last Thursday to attend the funeral of his nephew, Clarence W. Doyle.

Laughter.

Overindulgence in laughter is reprobed by Emerson. Explosions of it, he says, should be under strict control, and he quotes approvingly the saying of Lord Chesterfield, "I am sure that since I had the use of my reason no human being has ever heard me laugh." But Emerson is not altogether consistent in this matter, for, whereas in one passage he refers to laughter as a "contemptible squeal of joy," in another it becomes a "pleasant spasms," and he gratefully acknowledges "the rest and refreshment we get from the shaking of the sides." Moreover, he admits that "to see a man in a high wind run after his hat is always droll." Presumably if the man is bald and the road is muddy even Chesterfield might be led to emit a contemptible squeal.—London Chronicle.

Eat What You want of the food you need Kodol will digest it.

You need a sufficient amount of good wholesome food and more than this you need to fully digest it. Else you can't gain strength, nor can you strengthen your stomach if it is weak.

You must eat in order to live and maintain strength. You must not diet, because the body requires that you eat a sufficient amount of food regularly.

But this food must be digested, and it must be digested thoroughly. When the stomach can't do it, you must take something that will help the stomach.

The proper way to do is to eat what you want, and let Kodol digest the food.

Nothing else can do this. When the stomach is weak it needs help; you must help it by giving it rest, and Kodol will do that.

Our Guarantee

Go to your druggist today, and purchase a dollar bottle, and if you can honestly say, that you did not receive any benefits from it, after using the entire bottle, the druggist will refund your money to you without question or delay.

We will pay the druggist the price of the bottle purchased by you. This offer applies to the large bottle only and to but one in a family.

We could not afford to make such an offer, unless we positively knew what Kodol will do for you. It would bankrupt us.

The dollar bottle contains 2 1/2 times as much as the fifty cent bottle.

Kodol is made at the laboratories of E. C. DeWitt & Co., Chicago.

Who Pays For The Packages.

In the widespread discussion of the increased cost of living some attention is being paid to the great change which has come about in the manner of supplying most of the necessities in common use. Comparatively few people nowadays ever buy or even see a whole salt codfish, as in the old days. Such saltfish, as is used in the family comes from the grocery store, or market, boneless and in packages which have added materially to the cost. Dried beef and bacon in the same way, instead of being sliced at the market in quantities to suit purchasers. Crackers, biscuits, raisins, oatmeal, and so on and on, through all the long list, are brought in packages rather than in bulk by a large proportion of consumers, and at an increase in the cost, because the form is slightly more convenient. In fact, it is obvious that the cost of the package, showy labels and other accessories, is the result of a decided preference on the part of the consumer, but it makes a material increase in the course of a year in the living expenses of the average family.

Saved at Death's Door.

The door of death seemed ready to open for Murray W. Ayers, of Transit Bridge, N. Y., when his life was wonderfully saved. "I was in a dreadful condition," he writes, "my skin was almost yellow, eyes sunken, tongue coated, emaciated from losing 40 pounds, growing weaker daily. Virulent liver trouble pulling me down to death in spite of doctors. Then that matchless medicine—Electric Bitters—cured me. I regained the 40 pounds lost and now am well and strong." For all stomach, liver, and kidney troubles, they're supreme. 50c. at Trout's drug store.

Bits of Sentiment.

An occasional failure doesn't discourage a hustler.
