MEAT YEARS OLD FOUND IN COLD STORAGE PLANT

New York City .- On condition that I the name of the guide be withheld, entrance was gained by a World reporter to one of the largest cold storage plants in New York City, and methods employed to make the public pay fictitious prices for food were en at first hand.

All that was revealed by the investigation holds true, an experienced employe said, in many cold storage plants in the greater city. Records sedulously guarded by the plants would disclose, it was said, staple same way with those beets, turnips foodstuffs in sufficient quantities to knock the bottom out of high prices in New York immediately, but which are been out of the marketic and other vegetables there."

In one of the coldest of the storage rooms, attention was called to barrels are kept out of the market in order to force the public to pay exorbitant

These supplies are "canned in the cold" for from six months to three years or more and then released gradually during high-priced seasons, when they are sold as fresh products at gilt-edge figures.

Some of the articles viewed by the reporter were: 50,000 pounds of halibut placed in the plant three years ago.

Barrels of turkey and geese (number not given), two years old or more. 300 cases of eggs, the remainder of 5000 cases placed in storage begin-ning last April, purchased at about sold at from forty-eight to fifty-two cents per dozen as "strictly fresh

"There has been a big call for eggs 6,000. recently," the employe said, surveying the spacious room, which is kept at a teen cents a dozen. He's selling 'em now for fifty-two cents. You can't lose on eggs. If they get too old they are broken up and sold to the bakers.

Come along and I'll show you how they do it. He led the way to another room filled with four-gallon and two-gallon cans, and in which the temperature was only a few degrees above zero. The larger cans were filled with the egg volks and the smaller with the

Two huge storerooms filled with meat which hung in a temperature of six degrees above zero were next vis-ited. Beef, veal, mutton, lamb and other meats of a total weight of 200,-000 pounds had been in storage for seven months. Cattle Production Does Not Keep Pace With Population, Says Expert. New York City.—Nothing alarming to the consumer is seen in the high price of meat by the American Agri-culturist. In its annual review of live last few years, but this is because its stock on the farms it says that the in-production has not kept pace with the crease in value in the last twelve months, in spite of a decrease in the number of hogs and cattle other than milch cows amounts to $560,000,000, or the largest annual increment ever recorded.
