Mark Twain And Whistler.

One time Mark Twain met James McNeil Whistler, the artist. A friend having warned the humorist that the painter was a confirmed joker, Mark solemnly averred that he would get the better of Whistler should the lat-ter attempt "any funny business." Furthermore, Twain determined to anticipate Whistler if possible. So when the two had been introduced, which event took place in Whistler's studio, Twain, assuming the air of hopeless stupidity, approached a just completed painting and said: "Not at all bad, Mr. Whistler; not at all bad. Only," he added reflectively, with a motion as if to rub out a cloud effect, "if I were you I'd do away with that cloud."

"Great heavens, sir!" exclaimed Whistler, almost beside himself. "Be careful and don't touch that; the

An Eastern wholesale merchant developed a liking for society, golf and yachting. In the popular eye he was rich. Even some of the banks were free to accept his optimistic statements and his loans aggregated a large sum. One day, under the influence of a good dinner, he confided to a banker friend his conviction that most business men work too hard. "There are two kinds of organization," he said. "One is organization of work; the other for leisure. I have developed my business to the point where my organization almost takes care of itself. That is why I am able to spend so much time in recreations.

"I have reduced the thing to a systom. In two hours at my desk I can handle all the important matters necessary for my individual attention I rise at 9 o'clock, breakfast at 9.45 and go downtown in my auto so as to reach the office at 11. By 1 o'clock I am through with my day's work. I seldom go back after luncheon. It's all in the system. The banker repeated this conversa tion next morning to his associates at the bank. They looked up the wholesaler's card records and found that he was up to the limit. The "maximum loan" column showed big for many months, while the "average balance" column indicated anything but strength. "He's carried his 'organization for leisure' far enough," declared the credit man. "I think we'd better give him an opportunity to organize for work.

So the wholesaler was politely re quested to call on the president, and vas told that his line of credit must be heavily reduced at once. He was angry, and declared that he could get any accommodation he wanted anywhere in town. He would take up his notes immediately, he said, and also close out his account.

Within two hours the bank's credit man received three inquiries over the telephone from credit managers for other banks. All were told the truth straight and detailed.

Existing quotations are considered very low, and in consequence there is less dis position on the part of consumers to defer purchases in expectation of concessions

The primary dry goods marks still reflect light trading, but agents handling cotton goods lines are holding prices generally firm. Jobbers in Western markets have been shading prices at clearance sales to re duce stocks preliminary to stock tak ng, while announcement is made by large Eastern house that the usual emi-annual clearance sales will be omitted on the ground that costs of replacement are above current valnes. Staple printed goods are sell-ing in small lots, but Western advices state that business promises to be better next month, and there more inquiry for denims and colored goods. Miscellaneous port trade in cotton goods holds up well. Men's woolens rule quiet, but a little better business is noted in some parts of the dress goods market, warmer weather stimulating in-terest in seasonable merchandise. The feature from the producers' standpoint, is the substantial in-

Protection Of Birds

As a matter of course, the subject receiving the most attention from the fifth annual ornithological congress at Berlin has been the protection of birds, and it appears to have been the sense of the convention that the species of protection most needed is against the destruction of birds for the use of milliners. It is a question, however, if the sacrifice of feathered creatures for utilitarian purposes is by and means as great as that which made in pure wantonness, for no other reason than for the sake of killing. Almost everywhere there are laws prohibiting the wanton slaughter of birds. Their enforcement, however, is rarely sufficient to serve as a preventive. Here and there a game warden runs down an offender, but such instances are rather the exception than the rule. The trouble seems to be that the use of firearms is too common. The irresponsible individual who possesses a gun or a pistol has a desire to use it, and if game that is worth while and that may legally be killed is not within his reach, the chances are that he will blaze away at the first little feathered victim that comes in sight. As a consequence, small birds are fast disappearing from the vicinity of our towns and villages .- Pittsburg Chronicle-Telegraph.

The World's Population,

Much is made of the fact that the opulation of France is decreasing. Is it because we all shall be losers, if the death rate of that country continues to exceed the birth rate! Or is it because the rest of the world is especially fond of the French? Or is it because we fear that some day the population of the earth will be so small that human beings will not be numerous enough to combat beasts and and other evils which are successfully combated today?

Whatever may be the feelings with which the rest of mankind beholds the steady decline of the French people in numbers, the fact is there are still people enough on this planet, for while the population of France has increased only 3,000,000 since 1851, that of Germany had increased 30,000,000

Would it not be better then, to look on both sides of the population picture? It also might be well to consider this fact: If the French peo. have done their turn on this planet, the planet may have to recon cile itself to seeing them disappear or mingle with some other race .-Boston Globe.

one-legged men.
"Certainly." replied the merchant.
"What kind do you want?"
"Dress pants," said the man. "The best you've got."

Hurrying to the rear of the shop. the enterprising merchant snatched a pair of trousers and snipped off the right leg with a pair of shears.

Hastily turning under the edges he presented them to the customer.

"That's the kind I want. What's the price?" "Thirty shillings."

"Well, give me a pair with the left leg off. A month later the clothler was pronounced convalescent. - London

By Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

Chicago, Ill.—"I want to tell you what Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound did for me. I was so sick that two of the best doctors in Chicago said I would die if I did not have an operation. I had already had two operations, and they wanted me to go through a third one. I suffered day and night from inflammation and a small tumor, and never thought of seeing a well day again. A friend told me how Lydia E Pintharrie Log.

etable Compound had belyed her, and I tried it, and after the third bottle was cured."—Mrs. ALVENA SPERLING. If you are ill do not drag along at home or in your place of employment until an operation is necessary, but build up the feminine system, and remove the cause of those distressing aches and pains by taking Lydia E.
