Good Nature Rewarded.

The car was crowded as cars are sometimes, so the fat man stood in the vestibule. At his back was an open window, and the trolley rope hung idly in a graceful loop on the itside of the can and just below his neck. For several blocks everything was lovely. Then the car hit a low place without a corresponding low place in the trolley wire. The rope tightened to make up for the dis-crepancy and caught the fat man's hat brim with sufficient force to hurl out the window. Did the fat man frown and blame conductor? No. He looked at his fellow passengers, his face wreathed in smiles, and said: "Well! I'll be jiggered if that isn't the slickest thing I ever ex-perienced in all my days."

He pulled the bell rope once, and when the car had slowed down at the next corner he pulled it again twice and jumped off before the car had come to a full stop. The conductor, however, had seen it all. Evidently he was unwilling that his good natured passenger should wait for another car and sacrifice a nickel, so he pulled the rope once and the car waited.—Kansas City

Died In Suicide Pact.

Sharon.-A tragedy which occurred two weeks ago in Chicago, and which involved the deaths of two Sharpsville residents, Miss Ada Grandy and Fred Quinby, came to light here when a telegram was received by the parents of the girl, Mr. and Mrs. John G. Grandy, stat ing that the bodies of their daughter and of Quinby were lying in the Chicago Morgue,

In response to a telegram to the chief of police of Chicago, a message was received that the two bodies had been lying in the morgue for two weeks, and that they had been identified by papers in their cloth-ing. Little is known here concerning the manner of death, but friends and relatives of both think it was a suicide pact.

Modern Business Ethics.

A Chicago minister recently told the students of the University of Chicago that the code of modern business was pagan and not Christian, with brutality and selfishness as its chief attributes,

Modern business has much in it that is bad, but it is far from being ethically pagan and it is not, as im plied by this assertion, as bad as the business codes that preceded. It is a far cry from the day of apprentice ship slavery and imprisonment for debt to that of short hours, sanitary labor and liberal pay and laws ex-empting debtors from unfair exactions by creditors. Our Legandious old friend, Micawber, would, no doubt, revel in the patience and priv-ileges of this day and conclude that this era, without its debt-prisons and Uriah Heeps, was indeed a utoplan age. But the serious fact is that with all our strenuous competition, But the serious fact is that quick amassing of prodigious wealth, our business code is more humane, more mindful of the other man and his rights and, ladeed more moral than that of any people in history. All about us we see these men of colossal fortunes giving with lavish hand to charitable or other worthy causes and even in the severity of their business dealings they are not driving as cruel bargains as they
