The commendable thing to Ram's Horn about a bantam rooster is, that he puts every feather and toenail he has into his crow.

Summer is another season when we can all rejoice that we don't live in New York City, boasts the Syracuse Herald. There are three other such seasons.

He who says that the world is on the whole growing worse misleads the people who believe him, and, says the Christian Register, so far as his influence extends, puts an obstacle in the way of progress.

Says the New York World: Moderate users of the automobile who respect the rights of others, chauffers who are skilled and soher, need new legislation as much as does the man who walks or the playing child. They need it for protection not only from the road hogs but from the indiscriminate anger of the public, which ts now unable to discriminate beween those who use autos and those who abuse them.

The story runs, relates the Brooktyn Eagle, that once upon a time a reporter hurried into a Manhattan newspaper office, rushed up to the city editor's desk, and said: "I want to give you a column about a man's jumping from the Brooklyn Bridge to the water." The city editor responded coldly: "Make it two sticks. I'll give you two columns if you'll bring me in a story of a man's jumping from the water up to the Brooklyn Bridge. Anybody can jump down."

Very few people are aware that the first practical telescope-the one which Galileo used in discovering the satellites of Jupiter in January, 1610. is still in existence and preserved in the Museum of Physics and Natural Magazine. It is about three hundred years since this instrument was first turned toward the heavens. Unlike the present astronomical type, it had a concave instead of a convex eyepiece, just like the opera glasses now in use. When Galileo first exhibited his new telescope to the doge and an enthusiastic assembly he was overwhelmed with honors, because it was thought that the instrument would give the soldlers and suilors of the republic a great advantage over their

From a total of about three or four thousand competing athletes in recognized events in 1890 to nearly a million to-day is a wonderful expansion, but no less than the increase in the number of athletic clubs, from which these entrants come, from about fifty a score of years ago to several thousand. Practically every city and town now has a recognized athletic club, including in its membership not only competing athleter, but men prominent in affairs, in business and the professions who are interested in good, clean sport and who themselves enjoy the opportunities afforded for exercise and recreation. The increasing popularity of golf and tennis and outdoor games and the country club movement have no doubt done much to foster this interest. And it is an excellent development tending to counteract the effects of the sedentary life Imposed by modern conditions in the centres of population. For what the athletic clubs are doing toward building up physique, defeating the inroads of disease and promoting nealth they are a distinct gain to the com-yet definitely determined, although a board of inquiry was appointed im-mediately after the disaster by orders from the War Department in Washington.

The toll of death, it is believed, would have been larger had it not for the heroism displayed both by the officers and men in the bat tery. The wounded forgot their hurts and aided the uninjured in stamping out the burning powder that threatened the sacks in which the charge for a second shot had been brought up.

The explosion took place in Battery De Russey, No. 1 gun doing the damage. The pun was in charge of Capt. James Prentice, who had with him Lieuts, George P. Hawes, Jr., and George L. Van Deusen, Lieutenant Hawes had gone forward from the breech to examine the range wheel when the charge was exploded. He was thrown down and momentari stunned, but otherwise unin-

Eight men were killed outright their bodies lying scattered around the emplacement. Under the pall the wounded writhed and mosned. Captain Prentice and Lientenant Hawes foresaw a further sacrifice of life if the other charges caught from the smoldering sparks and the two sent out a call for surgeons, while they attacked the flames with their bare hands.

Captain Prentice reached the emplacement first, and before looking into the extent of the damage he pushed his way through the smoke and sparks and carried out a bag of powder. He then was joined by Hawes, and the two completed the task of averting a further explosion.
