Fulton County Fruit Lands.

John O'Connor of Colorado, seeing Fulton County's Great Fruit Lands etc., advertised in "Western Fruit Growers," wrote Frank Mason, agent, of McConnellsburg, for his "Booklet of Real Estate for sale." Then on receipt of same, a company of his fellow fruit growers arranged for Mr. O'Connor to arrive here last Tuesday to investigate. He was delayed until Thursday on the road. Agent Mason, being out in the county for the balance of the week, Mr. O'Connor could not see the properties desired on account of his other appointments farther east, but will return in the near future.

Mr. O'Connor believes that the lands advertised by Mason, as great fruit lands, is the proper place to grow apples—notwithstanding the effort made to convince him to the contrary while he was waiting to see Mr. Mason, and says that Fulton County has some of the best soil for apples of any he has found, but he thinks we do not have much that is best for peaches.

Mr. O'Connor gives interesting information about treating trees, growing and marketing apples.—Briefly:—head low, and thin all trees. Cut half or more of branches out of all old trees. Cultivate the ground but never rob the trees by growing grain of any kind. Grow red clover and cow peas to plow under. Spray; thin; if overbearing. All choice apples carefully packed in bushel boxes will bring $2 and upwards.

Fulton County needs a lot of such men as Mr. O'Connor to start the fruit industry that will make this a great county. If you can't encourage, don't be a "Knocker."
