The Handwriting Was Unmistakably That of a Woman.

COPYRIGHT 1908 by THE ASSOCIATED SUNDAY MAGAZINES COPYRIGHT 1909 by THE BOBBS - MERRILL COMPANY

CHAPTER I.

Miss Isabel Thorne.

All the world rubs elbows in Wash- gles, and left the room. His automoington. Outwardly it is merely a city bile was at the door. of evasion, of conventionalities, sated with the commonplace pleasures of chauffeur. life, listless, blase even, and always exquisitely, albeit frigidly, courteous; but beneath the still, suave surface hall. strange currents play at cross purcasionally, a bubble comes to the sur- line herself. I sent it." face, and when it bursts the echo goes trembles, a ministry topples over; but none was necessary." ripple moves and all is placid again. No man may know all that happens there, for then he would be diplomatic master of the world.

"but it's always frozen before they put tions are conducted in the drawingis fought down cellar. The diplomatists meet at table and there isn't frankness possessing an alluring, inany broken crockery, but you can always tell what the player thinks have called her pretty, yet her smile, of the dealer by the way he draws sults; and lots of monarchs of Europe sit up nights polishing their crowns waiting for word from Washington." So, this is Washington! And here at dinner are the diplomatic reprentatives of all the nations. That is liritish ambassador, that stolld: distinguished-looking, elderly and this is the French ambassadapper, volatile, plus-correct; Russia's highest representative age a huge, blond beard; and yonis the phlegmatic German ambas-Scattered around the table, int spotches of color, are the med envoys of the Orient-the er the country the more brilliant splotch. It is a state dinner, to ollowed by a state ball, and they all present. the Italian ambassador, Count di was trying to interpret a meh bon mot into English for the efit of the dainty, doll-like wife of inese minister-who was eduated at Radeliffe-when a servant over him and laid a sealed enbeside his plate. The count around at the servant, exhimself to Mrs. Quong Li Wi, opened the envelope. Inside was ceed, Madam," the ambassador objectngle sheet of embassy note paper, a terms line signed by his secre-

A lady is waiting for you here. says she must see you immediateon a matter of the greatest im-

The count read the note twice, with inkled brow, then scribbled on it in Impossible to-night. Tell her to at the embassy to-morrow morn at half-past ten o'clock."

He folded the note, handed it to the rvant, and resumed his conversaa with Mrs. Wi.

Half an hour later the same servant a second sealed envelope bede his plate. Recognizing the superion, the ambassador impatiently and was his reward:

It is necessary that you come to lubiassy at once." ere was no signature. The handage to him. He frowned a little lunch today. for his impassive face reflected that I was a madchen. . . . This beauty of the word two-bagger.

"To the embassy," he directed the

And within five minutes he was there. His secretary met him in the am," the ambassador assured her

"The lady is waiting in your office," poses, intrigue is endless, and the he explained apologetically. "I gave to night; and to-morrow I shall be merciless war of diplomacy goes on her your message, but she said she pleased to proceed as you may sugunceasingly. Occasionally, only oc- must see you and would write you a gest."

The ambassador laid aside hat and coat and entered his office with a slightly puzzled expression on his face. Standing before a window, gaz-There is plenty of red blood in ing idly out into the light-spangled Washington," remarked a jesting leg- night, was a young woman, rather stative gray-heard, once upon a time, tall and severely gowned in some rich, glistening stuff which fell away sheerin circulation. Diplomatic negotia- ly from her splendid bare shoulders. foom, but long before that the fight ing into a pair of clear, blue-gray eyes,

She turned and he found himself lookfrank enough and yet in their very definable subtlety. He would not slight as it was, was singularly charmthree cards. Everybody is after re- ing, and there radiated from her a think?" something - personality, perhaps which held his glance. He bowed low, and closed the door.

> "I am at your service, Madam," he said in a tone of deep respect. "Please pardon my delay in coming to you." "It is unfortunate that I didn't write the first note," she apologized graclously. "It would at least have saved a little time. You have the card?"

He produced it silently, crest down, and handed it to her. She struck a match, lighted the card, and it crumbled up in her gloved hand. The last tiny scrap found refuge in a silver tray, where she watched it burn to ashes, then she turned to the ambassador with a brilliant smile. He was still standing.

"The dinner isn't over yet?" she

"No, Madam, not for another hour, perhaps." "Then there's no harm done," she vent on lightly. "The dinner isn't of any consequence, but I should like very much to attend the ball afterward. Can you arrange it for me?" "I don't know just how I would pro-

ed diffidently. "It would be rather unusual, difficult, I may say, and-" "But surely you can arrange it some way?" she interrupted demurely.

"The highest diplomatic representative of a great nation should not find it difficult to arrange so simple a matter as-as this?" She was smiling.

"Pardon me for suggesting it, Madam," the ambassador persisted courteously, "but anything out of the usual attracts attention in Washington. I dare say, from the manner of your appearance to-night, that you would not care to attract attention to yourself." She regarded him with an enigmatic smile.

"I'm afraid you don't know women, Count," she said slowly, at last. There's nothing dearer to a woman's heart than to attract attention to herself." She laughed-a throaty, silvery note that was charming. "And if you hesitate now, then to-morrow-why, to-morrow I am going to ask that you open to me all this Washington world -this brilliant world of diplomatic soclety. You see what I ask now is simple

The ambassador was respectfully silent and deeply thoughtful for a time. There was, perhaps, something of resentment struggling within him, and certainly there was an uneasy feeling of rebellion at this attempt to thrust him forward against all prece-

"Your requests are of so extraorrdinary a nature that-" he began in courteous protestation.

There was no trace of impatience in the woman's manner; she was still

"It is necessary that I attend the ball tonight," she explained, "you may imagine how necessary when I say I sailed from Liverpool six days ago, reaching New York at half-past three o'clock this afternoon; and at halfpast four I was on my way here. I have been here less than one hour. I came from Liverpool especially that might be present; and I even dressed on the train so there would be no delay. Now do you see the necessity of it?" Dipiomatic procedure is along well-oiled grooves, and the diplomatist who steps out of the rut for an instant happens upon strange and unexpected obstacles. Knowing this, the ambassador still hesitated. The woman apparently understood.

"I had hoped that this would not be necessary," she remarked, and she produced a small, sealed envelope. 'Please read it."

The ambassador received the envelope with uplifted brows, opened it and read what was written on a folded sheet of paper. Some subtle working of his brain brought a sudden change in the expression of his face. There was wonder in it, and amazement, and more than these. Again he bowed low surprise for an instant, and this was "I am at your service, Madam," he followed by a keen, bewildered inter- repeated. "I shall take pleasure in est. Finally he arose, made his apolo- making any arrangements that are necessary. Again, I beg your pardon."

"And it will not be so very difficult, after all, will it?" she inquired, and she smiled tauntingly.

"It will not be at all difficult, Madgravely. "I shall take steps at once to have an invitation issued to you for

She nodded. He folded the note, re-"Quite correct," commented the am- placed it in the envelope and returned crashing around the earth. Some bassador. "What name did she give?" it to her with another deep bow. She times a dynasty is shaken, a nation "None," was the reply. "She said drew her skirts about her and sat down; he stood.

"It will be necessary for your name to appear on the invitation," the ambassador went on to explain. "If you give me your name I'll have my secretary-

"Oh, yes, my name," she interrupted gaily. "Why, Count, you embarrass me. You know, really, I have no name. Isn't it awkward?"

"I understand perfectly, Madam," responded the count. "I should have said a name."

She meditated a moment.

"Well, say-Miss Thorne-Miss Isabel Thorne," she suggested at last. "That will do very nicely, don't you

"Very nicely, Miss Thorne," and the ambassador bowed again. "Please excuse me a moment, and I'll give my secretary instructions how to proceed There will be a delay of a few minntes."

He opened the door and went out. For a minute or more Miss Thorne sat perfectly still, gazing at the blank wooden panels, then she rose and went to the window again. In the distance, hazy in the soft night, the dome of the capitol rose mistily; over to the right was the congressional library. and out there where the lights sparkled lay Pennsylvania Avenue, a thread of commerce. Miss Thorne saw it all, and suddenly stretched out her arms with an all-enveloping gesture. She stood so for a minute, then they fell beside her, and she was motion-

Count di Rosini entered.

"Everything is arranged, Miss Thorne," be announced. "Will you go with me in my automobile, or do you prefer to go alone?" "I'll go alone, please," she answered after a moment. "I shall be there about eleven." The ambassador bowed himself out.

And so Miss Isabel Thorne came to Washington!

(TO BE CONTINUED.)

Precocious Infant

about Robert Louis Stevenson, as il- led afterward to revise lustrating the cosmopolitanism of her opinion . . it aside intending to disre- Russian character, which Professor in a language quite unknown to me. But irritated curiosity final. Phelps says is accountable, in a and probably Russian. To complete triumphed, and he opened it. A measure, for the international effect the scroll of her accomplishments of the card on which was written this and influence of Russian novels. Stevenson, writing from Mentone to his mother, 7 January, 1874, said: later, Stevenson added, "The little "We have two little Russian girls, Russian kid is only two and a half; with the youngest of whom, a little she speaks six languages." ing was unmistakably that of a polyglot button of a three-year-old, I on, and just as unmistakably had the most laughable scene at . She said somestared at it wonderingly, then thing in Italian which made everybody

William Lyon Phelps tells this story | hasty conclusion as to my sex she was was announced

. . she said good-by to me in very commendable English." Three days

And "Safe." The New York savants who have urned the card over. There was laugh very much . . . after some been trying to pick out the 25 most ne on the reverse side—only a examination, she announced emphat beautiful words in the language seem Evidently the count recognized ically to the whole table, in German, also to have overlooked the inherent repeat?"

Manager Jim McAleer of Washington.

Manager Jim McAleer, of the Sena- | "Look at it this year. Jim Delators, is sweet on Detroit this season, hanty is a good, splendid second baseto perform like the Cubs-come back man. Bush is a good shortstop as and win their fourth flag.

He figured it thusly in a recent con- able a third baseman as the American versation: "When Detroit won the league has and the new man on first three pennants she did it with a bum hasn't got to be a wonder to be betinfield, one pitcher and a decrepit first ter than Rossman or Jones. The baseman. One year the pitcher was pitchers all look good and the team Mullin, another Donovan, while Ross- is hitting hard. Under those favorman and Tom Jones, never first-class able conditions why shouldn't Detroit first basemen, were on that bag.

TYRUS COBB IN VAUDEVILLE been considered, but so far the Geor-

Famous Tiger Player Has Received Many Tempting Offers to Go on Stage Next Winter.

It is not at all improbable that Ty Cobb may go on the stage next winter n a vaudeville act of some sort. Several managers have been after him to go on the boards and some of the offers made him have been attractive from a salary standpoint. Up to date, he has passed up the Thespian proposition, but next fall he will be ready to consider an offer.

Ty Cobb.

ture and a number of other plans have the latter are to be overhauled.

hits all at one time.

boxmen.

Highlanders.

Pittsburg.

the best pitching of any of the Nap

Wolter, Daniels and Cree are playing great ball in the outfield for the

have signed with another major league

Pfeffer and Beebe, two former University of Illinois pitchers, were pitted | Cincinnati.

gian hasn't been able to make up his mind just what he wants to do. There is no doubt that with any sort of an attractive act Cobb would be a great card in vaudeville, for hundreds of persons who would be willing to pay money just to see him before the footlights. Cobb says that he has plenty of confidence, and that he believes he could get away with anything be attempted in the line of a vaudeville skit. He has been called upon for speeches in theaters on several occasions and has been there with the flow of talk every time out. Having seen Mathewson and some of the other baseball actors. Ty doesn't think that there is much George Moriarity may be asked to arrange a sketch for the champion swatter, and it is possible that one or more ball players would be carried to assist Tyrus entertain the public.

SEATTLE PLANS BIG STADIUM

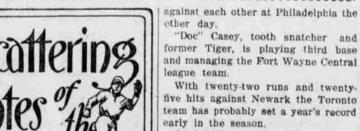

Students of University of Washington Want One Like That Now in Use at Harvard.

It is planned to provide the University of Washington at Seattle with a giant stadium similar to the one in use at Harvard. The plan was originally suggested by the board of control of the students' association.

In order to obtain funds to help construct the athletic arena it is suggested that the students' registration fee be increased from $5 to $6 yearly and that the extra money derived from the 2,500 students be placed aside for investment. At four percent, the sum would yield $13,000 in five years. This, with gifts, would make it possible for the athletic authorities to start work on the project. The subject will be presented to the general student body for final adoption at the next meeting of the committee on student affairs.

Mack Touts Detroit.

Connie Mack says that Detroit is 30 per cent, stronger this year than last, and is going to be a hard team to beat, "If it was some weak team that had jumped to the front as Detroit has, Ty's engagements have been such that playing away ahead of its true form, I would not be a bit afraid. But Detroit presents a different proposition. do not believe the Tigers have been Ty hasn't decided yet what sort of playing ahead of their game. The othan act he will attempt. A monologue, er clubs will have to get better and baseball sketch, moving picture lec- not rely on a slump by the Tigers, if option by Detroit at the end of the

Scattering Notes this "Doc" Casey, tooth snatcher and former Tiger, is playing third base and managing the Fort Wayne Central With twenty-two runs and twentyfive hits against Newark the Toronto team has probably set a year's record Catcher Stange, of the Tigers, broke Ty Cobb's bat during a practice ses sion and poor Tyrus has had to use a trange club to hit with. Tyler, Fred Tenney's new pitcher, looks good to the Boston fans. A lit-Connie Mack's men seem to get the tle more experience should make the youngster a regular winner. Gregg, a coast recruit, has done

Scranton, Pa. will spend $12,000 for a new part outside the city limits, so that it may play Sunday ball without offending the morals of the pastors. Milan, the Washington outfielder, is having his picture printed quite as

It seems that Vin Campbell would often as Walter Johnson is having his. Milan is making a great record club had he obtained his release from | this year. Outfielder Noojin is the latest playCOST OF BASEBALL PLAYERS

Experts Figure Nearly 400 Players Will Receive $800,000-McGraw in $12,000 Class.

Baseball sharps figure that before the pennant races end the magnates will have paid out more than $800,000 for services. It is conceded that the players in the National and the American leagues this year will receive more money for their labors than ever before in the history of the game. There is no salary limit and salary of $10,000, it is said.

$2,750 each, swelling the total salary Two distinguished physicians were relist to more than $85,000, a record in tained to swear to the sanity of the professional basebalt

The New York Americans also will Chase will draw about $7,000 for his

the pitchers will, as usual, be the star jury. performers on the salary list. According to current reports, the wages of tellect and a thorough master of the some of the more important men will run about as follows: $5,000 each; Walsh, Chicago, $6,000; Mullen, Detroit, $5,000; Adams, Pittsburg, $5,000; Brown, Chicago, $5,000; Collins, Philadelphia, $7,000; Lajoie, $6,000; Cobb. Detroit, $8,000.

Virtually all the big league clubs

Manager McGraw

except Boston will exceed the $50,000 mark in their salary lists.

Aside from the players' salaries, the expenses of each club will include about $8,000 for railroad fares, $6,000 for hotel accommodations, $6,000 for clerical work, $10,000 for rent and $5,-000 for uniforms, equipment and incidentals, or about $35,000

Tigers Release Beckendorf. Catcher Beckendorf has been released by Detroit to the Buffalo Eastern league club. The deal includes an

Former Highlanders Scatter. One of the official: of the New York

American baseball team has discovered that there is a former New York American on every team in the league this year. Chicago has Pat Dougherty; Detroit, Moriarty; St. Louis, Powell, Lake, Hoffman, Austin and Laporte; Washington, Alberfeld, Hughes and Conroy; Philadelphia, Thomas; Boston, Engle and Kleinow, and Cleveland, Manager McGuire.

McConnell Unlucky.

Amby McConnell is one of the unluckiest players in organized baseball. He is liable to injury more than most ball players because he takes such daring chances and he has been injured often. When Amby took off his shoe the other day after being spiked his foot was covered with blood, but he gamely walked to the car without assistance after Trainer Buckner had cauterized the wound.

Pitcher Samuel Leever has been released unconditionally by the Pittsburg league management. He was re to be secured by Chattanooga from the oldest pitcher in point of continuous service with the club.

USE OF ALCOHOL HEREDITARY

Pathetic Story of Brilliant Lawyer

Who Disowned Son When

Charged With Murder.

A young man from a good family committed an atrocious murder and the stipends range all the way from was put on trial for his life. His $1,500 to nearly ten times that transfather had been an excessive drinker. His father and mother both In the New York Nationals John Mc-drank moderately at meals. His life Graw, manager, who is not a player, and history indicated great brain. will receive about $12,000 for his work feebleness and degrees of insanity this year. Christy Mathewson is be for at least two years before the murlieved to be the highest paid ball play- ier. Public sentiment was very er in the profession. He signed a five strong against him at the trial. The year contract last winter at an annual district attorney had employed an able lawyer to assist him and he pub-The two dozen other players on the | licly announced that the cause of jun-New York team will average about fice demanded the prisoner's death. prisoner. I was called as an expert In his defense, says a writer in an receive liberal salaries. Manager exchange. As the trial went on it was evident that the efforts of the services as manager, captain and first state would be directed to break the baseman, with a chance to receive a force of my testimony as to the insubstantial bonus if the hill men win sanity of the prisoner. I answered the championship. Russell Ford, the the hypothetical question and exteam's star pitcher, will get close to plained it at some length for the de-$5,000 and the season's pay roll will fense, and then was cross-examined. foot up in the neighborhood of $65, by the state's attorney, who was evidently determined to destroy the im-Among the other big league teams pression which I had produced on the

The attorney was a man of keen inart of examining witnesses. After trying various methods to create con Coombs and Bender, Philadelphia, fusion in my statements, he settled down to a scientific examination, insisting on exact answers without qualifications. As the examination progressed it was evident to both of us Cleveland, $7,000; Wagner, Pittsburg, that we were surprising each other in questions and answers. There was in his questioning unmistakable indications of a very clear knowledge of the alcoholic mind and method of reasoning such as can never be described in books. Although two able physicians were scated at his side suggesting questions, it was evident that his knowledge of such cases was far superior to theirs, and the turns and forms of questions were revelations of famillarity with the subject that was a surprise to me.

At the close of the day's trial I concluded that a personal acquaintance with the attorney might give mean insight into his mentality that would be to my advantage in the next day's examination, which after 2 night of consultation and preparation would undoubtedly be still more severe. Upon being introduced by the judge, I, in an undertone, remarked to the attorney that I had never before been examined by any one who had such acute knowledge of the drink craze and its victims, and that I knew that this knowledge did not come from books. After a moment's hesitation he answered me with a quivering lip, "Yes, I know of this matter personally in my family and it has been a skeleton to me."

He asked me to come to his room at the hotel that evening for a per sonal talk. The interview lasted until midnight. He then told me of his only son who was expelled from college for drinking, and of how he had driven him away from his home against the advice of his wife, and that his son was now serving a life sentence for murder in a western prison. He spoke of his bitter feel ings against the attitude his wife had taken, for she had insisted that the boy was diseased. This he himself could not believe and he reviewed the heart burnings and sorrows which followed the death of his wife, and her steadfast faith in the mental sickness of the boy, and her disapproval of his own harshness; and how at her death he realized that she was right, but his pride and position made him fear to think of this subject seriously. He spoke of his own drinking days, and of his abstinence at his wife's request after the birth of him son. Even on this trial he did not dare to permit his feelings to assume the possibility of mental disease. I told him frankly that he made a mistake, that his wife was right, that him boy was a victim, the direct transmission of his own drinking habits.

We shook hands and parted with a cordiality which was not apparent in the next day's examination, and yet beneath the bluff and stern exterior I could see the real man struggling to put the question so that my answers would be the least favorable to his interest. The case was won. My testimony prevailed and the victim was placed in an insane asylum, where he died two years later. No one knew that our midnight interview saved this prisoner from judicial murder.

A few years afterward this lawyer employed me as an expert in the defense of a similar case. At the close of the trial I went to his son, a poor, harmless, half-idiotic man. No questions were asked, but I knew that he had only recently been released and brought home to die. The father's tenderness toward him showed this. The crime had been committed in another state and no one knew the facts of the case.

A year later this lawyer was found dead in his bed, and the boy was placed in a private asylum, where he is now living. Fortunately, his mind is gone and he is unable to recall the past. This incident illustrates some of the startling facts not recognized, which can be traced through families of alcoholic heredity, followed by great misery and sorrow and oftenjudicial murders. Poor alcoholized. insane men, whose parents and relatives are responsible, are constantly going to the gallows, and the harsh delusions of the law of sanity and reason are contradicted by every possible fact and condition.

Drunkenness in Germany.

Germany is called the model been drinking nation and is held up to show that lighter drinks are conducive to temperance. Yet statistics show that in Germany 15,000 persons annually receive treatment for de lirium tremens.