A Charming Woman
is one who is lovely in face, form, mind and temper. But its hard for a woman to be charming with out health. A weak, sickly woman will be nervous and irritable. Constipation and kidney poisons show in pimples, blotches, skin eruptions and a wretched complexion. But Electric Bitters always prove a godsend to women who want health, beauty and friends. They regulate Stomach, Liver and Kidneys, purify the blood; give strong nerves, bright eyes, pure breath, smooth, velvety skin, lovely complexion and perfect health. Try them. 50c. at Trout's drug store.

THREE-MILLION DOPE FIENDS.
It is hard to believe that the Government officials are correct when they announce that there are three millions of so-called fiends in this country—that is to say, victims of some of the deadly drugs which most people know only by name. Cocaine, morphine and other such devastating drugs are being used in enlarged quantities, and recent events in this city show how wide-spread their use is becoming.

Here, declares the Philadelphia Inquirer, is a chance to do some reform in a vigorous way. There seems to be enough law on the subject if it is vigorously enforced, but it is not true that punishment is now severe enough. The use of these drugs can be suppressed only by maintaining a strict control over the sale of them. The worst feature of them all is that they are so insidious. It is a long time before the victim is known and then it is apt to be too late.

It does seem as if the Federal Government and the States could work together so as to make it impossible for unlawful dispensers to get a supply. When a man has acquired a desire for these drugs he will make almost any sacrifice to secure them. Alcohol at its worst is a simple matter compared with cocaine and other "dopes."

AGAINST ESPERANTO.
Of course it is no answer to the arguments of the Esperantists that languages have never been made deliberately, but have been of natural growth. The fact that there is no precedent for Esperanto does not detract from its possible merits, argues the New York Times.

But time is valuable and the time employed by an English-speaking person in learning Esperanto might be better employed in learning French or German or both. With command of one of those two languages in addition to English he could make his way with little trouble in all civilized countries; with both he would be in touch with the whole world. Then new avenues of culture would be open to him, and the world's literature would be at his command. In time the whole world may have one language, but it will never be Esperanto. The more fervent advocates of the new and arrogant jargon claim too much for it. Its moderate upholders do not convince us of its utility.

Showing Faith in Their Well-doing.
In a home where there are young people, I believe it is a wise plan for the elder members of the family to express a judicious amount of confidence in their judgment and trustworthiness. Many a young man or woman may be helped toward a noble life by feeling that someone expects good things of them. One dislikes to disappoint one's friends, and often a young person will form an ideal in this way which later will be realized, to some extent at least. My mind recalls a boy who was just coming into manhood, a thousand miles from home, with the money that he earned entirely at his disposal. A woman several years his senior, seeing his danger of being drawn into undesirable friendships, gently warned him of some of the pitfalls which surrounded him, at the same time telling him that she felt sure that he would avoid them, as he now understood them; and that she fully trusted him and believed that he possessed strength of character sufficient to avoid them. This young man now began to think, something that he had never learned to do before. The result was that he chose such friends as he thought would be approved by his counselor, and eventually developed into a fine manhood.

A girl of fifteen, whose mother was not worthy the name, and who was in a state of great discouragement and in a very trying position, was greatly helped by being told by a friend that she believed the girl was equal to the situation, and could be trusted to do what was right. She took new courage from this assurance, and proved herself worthy of her friend's good opinion.

If a child, younger or older, can be impressed with the idea that Father or Mother or Auntie feels a certain pride and confidence in his or her character, it is a shallow nature indeed that will not be put more or less upon its mettle thereby, and try to fulfill the expectations of these elder person. Young people must have an aim in life, and if in early life they learn to reach forth toward worthy things, it will be easier later to withstand the temptations that are sure to beset them.
