MORMONISM.

(Continued from first page.) the patriarchs. It was tolerated by the laws of Moses, but the custom seems to have died out, for there is no trace of it in the New Testament.

Civilized and Christian nations have, as far as we can find, always stood for monogamous marriage, while heathen countries have allowed it and practiced it. What, then, and where are we? We have a spot on our face and in our body that does not respond to the life flow of our nation.

As a social system, polygamy is a miserable failure, because it is founded on law or retrogression. The chief corner stone being the degradation of women.

The bondage under the polygamous condition is worse than Israel's bondage in Egypt, and in like manner requires the hand of God to extricate them from their down-trodden condition.

Cunningcraftiness is also a part of their inductive method of winning converts, or adherents. They preach that their women are in true happiness. Of course, we know to be deluded and down-trodden is certainly the right path to happiness!

The testimony of a few women will prove very satisfactorily to us that they are not happy: The words of a wife, whom another had crowded out, or supplemented her from her full love of husband. From the day of his second marriage, she began to be consumed, at least both physically and mentally, and her friends said she had the consumption and was dying from its effects, but she said it was only a wasting heart.

The experience of a young girl, who was induced from New York to become a plural wife. She afterwards said that the happiest day of her life was the day she saw her husband laid in the grave.

Again, if the prophet saw fit to have another wife he had a right to compel her divorce to become concubine to himself. It is not a matter of choice or consent on the part of the wives, but they are coerced into consent and later and later they even married without the consent of wives at all.

Another young couple from an eastern state went to Utah. At the time they had two children and a happy home. Finally her husband, after much solicitation from his brethren, was induced to practice his religion, as they called it, and wife forced to consent. Wife's testimony was that by her consent she dug a grave in which she was to bury her happiness and home. Then a third wife comes onto the scene, thereby making a hell, or grave, for the second wife.

A missionary who was preaching their religion in England, through deception, took a wife, bringing her to his own home in Utah. She was given a warm reception to his already-prepared home—already furnished with a wife and a number of children. Though this system is called "Celestial Marriage," we are confident there were no angel spirits leading the music of that home just then. For shame the English wife would not return to her home. She was forced to infidelity, as most Mormon women are, and to testify of herself, "I am a miserable apology of a woman."

A man's testimony: "My wife was a perfect angel until I took a second wife, then she became a perfect demon. A wife being dragged to the Endowment house, where she was to give consent and help select another wife for her husband, said to her husband: 'I must lie to you; lie to the President, and lie to God, for I must say that I consent, and I would rather die a thousand deaths than to give consent.'"

Such a system is degenerating in its nature. It not only degenerates woman, but man is degraded to the level of a beast. And then, too, that it comes under the guise of religion makes it all the more intolerable.

The women are more to be pitied than censured, but there is no pity to the men, especially he who hazards the vengeance of God in false revelation, making God responsible for its existence.

Womanly Wisdom. Always put off till to-morrow what is wrong to be done to-day. Heat your knife before cutting hard soap.

Wet a cloth with a bit of soda on it and clean up the grease spots on your kitchen floor. Jelly from berries picked wet is almost sure to mold, and doesn't jell right. Try to pick them dry.

Put a few grains of rice in your salt shakers. They will break the lumps, gather the moisture and make the salt come out freely.

Glue pieces of felt or pieces of old rubbers to the bottom of the chair legs, and there will be no scratched floors and less noise.

An emergency glue may be made of rice. Boil a handful of rice in water until it is a thick fine paste. Very good for pasting white paper.

In making cake with fruit in it, beef suet and butter, half and half, is better than all butter. I have known lard and beef suet to give good results.

When a ham or smoked tongue has been boiled, try plunging it in cold water as soon as removed from the fire; this will make the skin come off easily and smoothly.

A handy way to remove pies and cakes from a hot oven is to use a common shingle. Cut away the thick end into the shape of a handle. Bore a hole in it and keep the shingle hanging behind the stove.

If you have some work to do in the sun and have no sunbonnet, take a piece of paper, pin it to gether behind, run a string over the top and through a slit at each side, and tie it under the chin. It may rattle a good deal but may save you a headache.

String beans cut with a pair of sharp scissors, on a slant, instead of straight across, will cook more quickly if one happens to be pressed for time. This may seem a notion, but I have tried it often, and have found the beans to cook quicker than when broken straight across in the usual way.

Out Of The Ginger Jar. One may retail apples, but it is impossible to retail a dog. While few women are able to write for the magazines, all can write for a catalogue.

It is too much like the historical novel,—one part truth to three parts fiction. On the very first of Jan. A new diary he began; But before the first of Feb. His well-meant zeal began to ebb. The chestnut tree is exceedingly popular with the small boy; but a well laden doughnut tree would give him greater joy.

Of all the monopolists the one we most detest is he who monopolizes conversation and prevents us from getting in our word. At last we have something to be really thankful. Fashion has decreed that the "rampant rat" and the "bulging bun" must go.

It will require more than one coat of whitewash to renovate some politicians. Indeed, some of them need a disinfectant added to the lime. Wiseacres advise us not to go to extremes; but how can we comb our hair or put on our shoes in the morning without going to extremes?

It was not "Mrs. Partington," but some other woman who observed that the Sterling family must have been large and very rich at one time, judging from the great quantity of silverware marked with their name.—From January Farm Journal.

A South Carolina minister prayed before proposing to a young lady. She never heard his prayer, but the probability is she was the one who answered it.

IMPATIENT IDEALISTS. John Morley was known a generation ago as a brilliant and audacious sceptic in religion and a radical in politics. He has had a strange experience. Because he had great ability and wide knowledge of men and things, responsibilities have been forced upon him, and in spite of himself he has been drawn into the ranks of the rulers of the nation.

Despite the careful scrutiny given every bill that leaves the Bureau of Engraving and Printing, a number of "freak" notes find their way into circulation from time to time. Such a one was a note that once came to the Sub-Treasury at New York. It had the imprint of a twenty-dollar note on one side and of a ten on the other.

In most cases the "freak" bills that have escaped the vigilance of the bureau's officials are national bank notes, which, like the regular Treasury notes, are printed there. As intimated already, the face value is always recognized when the "freaks" come to be cashed at any branch of the Treasury.

The notes are printed in sheets. Usually there will be one twenty and two tens on a sheet. They are printed one side at a time, so it can readily be seen that the printer, in turning over the sheet, might get it upside down, and thus put a ten-dollar back on the twenty-dollar note or a twenty on the back of one of the tens.—Harp-er's Weekly.

YOU ALWAYS CAN TELL. People on their wedding journeys never really conceal the fact. They may talk and act as indifferently to each other as they please, but the unfamiliarity of each with the tea and coffee requirements of the other will betray the secret to the observing, and the topics of the conversation between them will advertise the fact to the most oblivious. That is the conclusion reached by a friend of the Office Window man of the New York Mail. "At the hotel table," he said, "I caught myself talking to my bride, within earshot of other people, of things that no veteran husband would disclose to his wife, because she would know them already. For example, I told two or three stories of my childhood days. Every seasoned wife has heard all such stories several times, and none but a Newlywed could repeat them."

Rheumatic Pigs. Pigs are troubled by rheumatism more than by any other disease. Its work is so insidious oftentimes and its attacks so various in form that it is not recognized, but it may be set down as a rule that if the pig be afflicted by some mysterious malady, particularly one that incapacitates it in some manner, it is rheumatism.

OPENINGS OF FICTION.

A careful study of contemporary fiction, says a writer in the Westminster Gazette, shows that there are six recognized methods of beginning a story. These are: (1.) The modern society opening. (2.) The John Driveller, or testamentary, opening. (3.) The local color opening. (4.) The detective opening. (5.) The peaceful country house opening. (6.) The spirited, or Gadzooks, opening.

Of the specimens appended, the John Driveller opening comes closest to the mark: I, John Driveller, of St. Mary Pip-lington, in the County of Devon, Yeoman, being now in my eighty-second year, would fain make clear, while yet there is time, those strange events which befell me in the days when George was King. I have little skill in the use of words, and my hands are more accustomed to the sword than the pen; but if you would have a plain story of stirring deeds and of the love of a lad for a lass . . .

And here my dear wife looks over my shoulder and playfully says she must help me when I come to speak of these matters—matters in which she played so brave a part. 'Tis hard to realize that sixty years have passed since first we met. It seems but yesterday, and yet to-day our grandchildren are swarming like bees in the orchard. Strange, strange! But to our muttons, as the French—a curious people—say. Well, you must know I was born . . . etc. This kind of opening is only too familiar, and yet it is a type which is not evil in essence, but in its abuse. It would be easy to think of half a dozen novels, all good and some great, which begin in this fashion.

PHYSIQUE AND HONESTY. Dr. G. C. Elson, medical examiner at the University of Wisconsin, has evolved a theory as to the relation between physique and morals which is not only humane, but highly suggestive. Comparing the measurements of 2,000 students who were brought before the faculty on charges of dishonesty with similar measurements of 2,000 students whose records were clear, Dr. Elson found that every one of the accused was physically deficient in every requirement of the standard of qualification. This showing strongly supports the contention, advanced by many physiologists, that certain moral defects should be treated by cranial surgery. Cases have been reported in the newspapers in which surgical operations on the cranium were said to have caused profound and beneficent changes in the character and disposition of the patients. Whether moral delinquency should always be regarded as a condition due to physical defect is an open question. Probably the average practitioner would hardly care to go that far. But on the principle that a sound body is the best assurance of a sound mind, medical science is more and more inclined to recognize moral deficiency as the reflex of an unsound physique.

AWAKENING FROM SLEEP. Persia, like Turkey, is awakening from her sleep of centuries, and aspires to resume the position she once occupied in the affairs of the great world. She has a constitution and some other modern improvements, but she hasn't caught up with the times enough to provide herself with a real transportation system. Horses and donkeys still constitute the passenger and freight carrying resources of the empire which once dominated the east. Still, Persia has one railroad. It is ten miles long, and runs from Teheran, the capital, to the shrine of a defunct shah. The general manager of this road hasn't much trouble in figuring his ten-mile costs. Strikes do not disturb his slumbers. The finance committee does not bother itself with dividend policies or bond issues, nor does he lie awake nights wondering if rate-regulating bills are going to pass the Persian parliament.—Moody's Magazine.

YIELDED TO TEMPTATION. In appealing for leniency for his client, who had pleaded guilty in the federal court on a charge of smuggling, an ingenious and resourceful lawyer is represented as suggesting that the prisoner at the bar "should not be considered a smuggler, but simply a person who had yielded to the temptation of committing an infraction of the revenue laws." However much the vulgar smuggler may deserve punishment, there should evidently be no penalty whatever for so thoroughly respectable and distinguished a personage as "an infractor of the revenue laws!" Great are the resources of our capacious and delicately shaded mother tongue.

SINGULAR BLINDNESS. Several conductors employed by a Western railroad company have been dismissed for returning unpunched tickets to the train agent, with whom the profit from repeated sales were divided. With such certainty is that sort of fraud detected that those who practice it show a singular blindness and disregard of self-interest, to say nothing about the Eighth Commandment.

BURGLAR GOT IT. The incident reported from Aurora, Ill., of the burglar who, breaking into the home of a citizen, was cornered by that gentleman's wife and lectured on the error of his ways is not so inexplicable on second thought to the New York Tribune, as upon first consideration. The lady was doubtless sitting up awaiting the return of her spouse, and the burglar merely got what the husband happily missed.

A Buffalo educator defends the college yell on the ground that it banishes "russidness." It does. Young man memorizing his college yell and practicing so as to emit it with correct emphasis has little time for anything else.

IN BUYING An Automobile

You want the best your money will get. No machine on the road to-day possesses so many attractions to the careful buyer as

THE E. M. F.

For size, speed, appearance, durability, ease of control, hill-climbing and sand ploughing, this

AT $1000, is the greatest bargain on the market.

The Flanders at $700, is a smaller machine but none the less desirable. Don't tie yourself up until you have carefully examined these machines.

TWO CARLOADS.

Two Carloads of Buggies at one time, seems pretty strong for a Fulton county dealer, but that is just what W. R. EVANS, Hustontown, Pa., has just received. In this lot are 5 different grades and styles, of Buggies and Runabouts including the Millinburg. He has on hand a large stock of Hand Made Buggy Harness.

The Prices? Don't mention it. If the prices were not below the lowest, he would not be selling by the carload.
