Walnut Grove Campmeeting Case Settled

The suit entered against the Walnut Grove Campmeeting Association by the elders of the church of God at Walnut Grove was withdrawn last Thursday after the Association and the elders had agreed upon a 'oasis of settlement. The camp will, no doubt, because of this go on to greater usefulness.

The Association met last Thurs day and transacted considerable business pertaining to the camp which is to open August 4th. Arrangements are being made to make entrance to the ground more convenient. As the bills of the camp announce, no admission will be charged but all are invited

Mr. H. G. Ashton has opened the camp hotel and the camp ground is assuming signs of life. Tent holders and boarders will soon arrive. The hotel was announced to open July 15th. Mr. Ashton sets an excellent table and is endeavoring to accomodate

Tents and rooms are being rented. Rev. F. W. McGuire of Saxton, the General Manager, has therenting of tents and rooms and reports that they are being rapidly filled up. The settlement of the law suit assures a good campmeeting. The prospect was bright, despite the trouble and now that there is union and harmony, great results are anticipated. The aim of all is to make this the "Banner Camp." The campmeeting ground hes near the boarder of Fulton county and is a place where many gather from Clear R dge, Hus tontown, New Grenada and other points. This year persons are coming to camp from Lancaster, Dauphin, Cumberland. Perry and Bedford counties while Altoona and Pittsburg will be well repre sented. All are invited.

CHIMPANZEE USES

Professor Garner Teaches It the Word "Feu" Which Is French for "Fire"

SPENT SEVEN YEARS IN AFRICA

Returns to America with An Animal from the Depths of the Forest That Seemingly Understands Many Things He Says.

A chimpanzee which is learning to talk like a human being was a passenger in the French steamship La Tournine, from Havre to New York. With the chimpanzee came Professor Richard L. Garner, who, for the last seven years, has been buried in the depths of an African forest learning monkey language. Garner's chimpanzee is named Susie. She can speak as yet only one word, "feu," which in French Gus Davison and Alf Johnson of means "fire." Garner expects to teach her other human words so that in the end she may be able to communicate her thoughts to the highest order of to use his own expression, "run like primates on the globe. Susie was a source of wonder to her fellow voyagers in La Touraine, principally because of her apparent ability to understand some of the things said to

Also, Susie has been taught to ner says ranks her above all others of her species. As for the chimpanzee Germantown, Md., is visiting her language, Garner says he has twelve or fourteen of the twenty or more distinct monkey words, and he believes he has mastered nine of the sounds Howard Mellott and Henry Sharp so he knows just what they mean. paper men got aboard Professor Gar-

"Susie, love your pop?"

The chimpanzee put her arms Well, we hear a good many stories around the neck of the professor and senger handed the chimpanzee a stick of gum and she was about to put it in her mouth when the professor

"Don't eat that." The chimpanzee held the gum out Rigel, the cattle dealer, was in the and looked at it earnestly.

"Give it to this man," said Garner. Then Susie turned around and handed the gum to a man pointed out by the professor. Afterward the professor had the chimpanzee act in a manner that appeared to be that of laughing, and when he left her she appeared to cry. Professor Garner remarked that Dr. Hornaday of the Miss Enza Wink, who underwent an New York Zoological Gardens has said cessful. Asked whether he has been Miss Eila Hoop, of Andover, spent able at any time to teach words of several days last week visiting in the the human race to his dumb animal subjects, Professor Garner sald:

"I taught one the word 'Feu,' the French word for 'fire.' When I would light a match she would call You' as soon as the flame showed, but would remain silent when a burned-out match was shown. A hot cinder would bring the word 'feu' and so, too, would the sight of a campfire."

Professor Garner said he found chimpanzees affectionate to a high degree. Chimpanzees are of a forgiving disposition, and will succeed in politics, when they learn the language, it

Professor Garner says when he left America seven years ago he went to the French Congo, and from Cape Lopez he proceeded into the interior until he reached the waters of Lake Fernan Vas, where he decided to settle himself for a lengthy pursuit of his studies. The place in which he made his headquarters in these jungles was called American Point. A special cage which he had taken for his work went overboard before he reached the place, and he decided to confine what chimpanzees he could get in a house which he constructed at American Point. The number of chimpanzees which he had in the place at various times in his long stay reached twentytwo and the gorillas reached nine.

"The gorillas proved by no means so tractable as the chimpanzees," he said, "and not nearly so intelligent, if I may use that term. There have been misconceptions of my teachings at various times, and a lot of this has been because some of the things which I have said have been misconstrued. I would be pleased to have you be very careful in getting down correctly my beliefs in regard to communication among the animals I studied." Professor Garner says chimpanzees have one certain call when they go into the bush. Gorillas, the professor asserts, fear men probably as much as men fear them. He said that in the gorilla group, the old gorilla is the fighter, and has a way of conducting a family of gorillas to a place of safety before returning to a point of danger to wage fight against man or beast. He related one incident in which he and two native companions sighted a monster gorilla forty rods from them. He said the animal gave the most horrible cry he had ever heard-evidently a warning cry and then retired. One of the natives asserted the gorilla would return to a retreat,

LIONESS SWUNG FROM TREE.

Cowboy Recognized by Great Cat

When He Visits Zoo. Buffalo Jones, cowboy, who recently lassoed a lioness in British East Africa, and Cherry Kearton, natural ist, who snapped him with a camera in the act, went up to the Bronx Zoo, New York City, to talk over their adventure and incidentally to see how their new pet was thriving in captivity. Only a few days before they had luncheon with Colonel Theodore Roosevelt in Sagamore Hill, and made the former President show his teeth with enthusiasm as they related their experience to him. Their visit to the Zoo was the first glimpse of the Honess since they hauled the animal up to a limb of a tree in East Africa by the hind leg on a lasso, and they were curious to see whether she had any recollection of them, Colonel Roosevelt knew when he was in Africa that the two men had planned their cowboy trick, but he dld not get the details of the adventure until a few days ago, Buffalo Jones has the reputation of being willing to lasso anything that runs on four feet, Kearton, who spends weeks in studying birds and animals in Africa and getting pictures of them, has walked within a few feet of lions engaged in combat in the jungle and snapped them. Likewise he has walked up to the open mouths of hippopotami and, having snapped them, has, hell" to get out of their way.

"That lioness, however," said Jones, "was the hardest thing I ever tackled." "And," said Kearton, "Buffalo Jones and the lioness were the hardest things I ever tackled with a camera, because they wouldn't keep together within range of the camera."

"We spotted the lioness in a ravine, hiding in grass," said Jones, a tall, lean, gray-haired Westerner. "I was on foot and unarmed-a gun and a revolver were only in the way, and I knew that if I could not get out of the animal's way a weapon was no good. The first time I got the lasso over the animal's head the beast simply spread out her neck and made her neck muscles so big that the noose slipped over her neck when the man on horseback pulled the rope taut.

"We made another try. This time we ran the rope up over a limb of a tree. She fought and bit and tried to curl herself up so that she could bite the rope, but she could not reach it. We finally threw another lasso around one of her front paws, and we stretched her out so that she was helpless, and we bound her tight and put her in a cage."

"I never thought they would do it, but I went along," said Kearton, "because I knew it would make a good picture, whatever happened."

When the two men reached the lion house in the Zoo they went to the cage where the lioness was skulking sourly behind a stump. Buffalo Jones attracted the animal's attention, and the beast, taking one glance at him, lunged flercely at the cage. She glared at him, then slunk back to a corner, where she crouched. "I guess she remembers me," said own in the desert practice of healing. Rattlesnake oil cures rheumatism and the stiffened joints a man gets working down in a wet mine; the oil rubbed in the ears cures deafness, and a rattlesnake skin, tanned soft and supple as chamois and worn around the waist, will keep a man well on the hardest trip-but the dust from the rattles will cause blindness which nothing will cure. There is a plant which the rattlesnake fears-he will not crawl across it, and if it is dropped on him he uncolls and crawls away. Perhaps this is only a bit of myth, but every desert man knows the golondrina-the creeping plant with tiny, round, gray green leaves and minute white blossoms with a brown centre.

Jones triumphantly.

"Rattlesnake weed" grows in the little open spaces from the pines to the white sand hills that shift back and forth in each year's wind. The leaves pounded into a wet mass are bound on a snake bite, and the victim, man or animal, is given huge draughts of the bitter, dark tea, into which the whole plant is steeped. The golondrina tea Is used as a liniment for rheumatism too, and the Mexican women know that it dyes cotton cloth an enduring purplish black.

If the golondrina is too far to find there as another desert cure for any snake blte-a cure well enough attested and one with which many an Indian has fought bullet wound and sabre cut and mastered incipient blood poisoning. The leaves of any flat leave opuntia, but especially the common prickly pear, are thrown on a campfire till the thorns are singed off and the skin puffs up in watery blisters, then split open and bound hot on the wound. So many a pack mule has been restored to place in the train and many a limb that a physician would have amputated has been saved to do its owner good service on desert trails. Out West.

Drought Has No Terrors.

George T. Hulstzer of Livingston, N. J., has successfully applied the science of aviation to agriculture in a manner that may be adopted by other grangers in this section to offset the effect of the annual dry spell. Hulsizer has two acres of land under cultivation planted with fate vegetables.

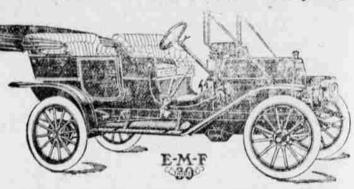

The plants suffered during the recent drought. Hulsizer, who is somewage fight, and the three men beat | thing of an inventive genius, rigged up a biplane "glider," the dimensions of which about equaled an old style Wright machine. To this he attached a 100-gallon boller and equipped it with a sprinkler.

At the end of a rope attached to a windlass it rose from the force of the wind in the air and when It had reached the right position over the farm the sprinkler was opened by pulling a cable. The water descended in a refreshing shower on the plants, and the field was sprinkled by simply drawing in or unwinding the rope on the windlass. Hulsizer's crops have flourished while his less enterprising neighbors' have lagged.
