Why Iron Rusts.

British investigators estimate that the rails of a single railway system in every day, and that the larger part of this loss is due to the effects of rust. The problem of rust is of great econosuch losses as that just mentioned, but also because of the great expense involved in repainting tron and steel structures in order to preserve them. Thus $10,000 a year is spent in painting the great Scotch bridge over the Forth. Recent experiments indicate pure oxygen does not rust. It appears to be necessary for the production of rust that some acid, notably carbonic acid, shall be present. When Iron is subjected to the action of water containing traces of acid, and in the presence of atmospheric oxygen, it always rusts. The rapid rusting of iron in railroad stations is ascribed to the presence of sulphuric acid derived from the smoke of locomotives.

Swarming Bees' Scout.

Swarms of bees are sometimes compelled to take refuge in very remarkable shelters. A peculiar and instructive instance was observed by the writer in the spring of 1908. The swarm flew over a large vineyard which contained low buildings. One of these buildings was constructed of hollow concrete blocks. The swarm flew directly toward a small hole in one of the blocks and disappeared in and called at the NEWS office, the interior. No doubt the swarm had rested on a tree or shrub on the preceding day and had sent out scouts to seek a home.

The scout found the little hole leading into the great cavity of the concrete block, and reported their discovery to their comrades. This case furnishes indisputable proof that swarming bees really send out scouts, as they are believed to do, for the little hole could not have been discovered in the rapid and lofty flight of the swarm .- Scientific American.

Photo Wakes Up and Goes to Sleep. Changeable photographs of an unpreredented novelty, taken after a method perfected by the secretary of the Faculty of Science in the University of Marseilles, M. Estanave, were lately elucidated before the Academy of Sciences at Paris, and are now creating a sensation in the scientific papers M. Estanave, it seems, produced what is called technically a "dia-positive" on glass of a sleeping woman. By inclining the picture ever so little and then shaking it a trifle, the eyes of the picture apparently open like the orbs of a porcelain doll. In the photograph, morever, the entire countenance becomes radiant with the most animated expressiveness. When the photograph is inclined to its first position the eyes slowly close once more .-- Current Literature.

He dived deeply into a capacious pocket, drawing forth a big wad of bills, and thrust them into the old man's hand. "Here," he muttered, gratefully, take it. It's all yours-father." There was something in the intonation of the last word that caused the old couple to look up into his eyes He was staring wistfully, smiling hopefully at them. And-all in a minute-they understood.

"Jimmy," both voices broke into thankful sobs. "Jimmy-son-you've come home." Then the light of real happiness sprang into the stranger's eyes as he seized a hand of each. "Yes," he echoed heartily, "and

I've come to stay and take care of you. No more waiting, no more setting an empty place for me, no more work and no more poverty." The echo of his words died away to the fervent thanksgiving of his mother's "Bless God! The good Lord did provide after all-in his own way."-MISS A. L. PRATT.

Slavery in England.

Slavery existed in England without any mitigating features worth speaking of until the time of the Wars of the Roses. Bracton, the famous lawyer of the time of Henry III., informa us that the condition of slaves was fearful. It was indeed slavery, pure and simple. All the goods a slave acquired belonged to his master, who could take them from him whenever he pleased, the slave having no redress at law. Hence the impossibility of a man's purchasing his own freedom. The only hope for the slave was to try and get into one of the walled towns, when he became free, the townsmen granting him liberty on the condition of his helping them fight the nobles .- New York American.

Aluminum Improved.

Softness and other unfavorable qualities of aluminum may be over come, by alloying it with magnesium. An alloy of this kind, to which the name "magnalium" has been given is now manufactured in Germany an' its makers believe that its use will shortly supersede that of pure eluminum.
