We would say to every young lady, mark these men who are lounging around attempting to live by their wits, or on the interest of their debts; and when they ask you to share the lot of an aimless life, passed them on, for you cannot afford to marry a man without prosperity or business habits, unless you wish to sell yourself for a mess of pottage.

from dry killing. Even where the bacteria are established in the fields, I have found that inoculating with the fresh cultures has imparted fresh vigor, and has saved clover from dry-killing, while, right beside it, uninoculated clover has been partially or totally destroyed. If you are going to seed clover this fall send me a postal asking for inoculating material, and I will send it to you at once with instructions how to use it.

The Two Men Inside.

An old Indian once asked a white man to give him some tobacco for his pipe. The man gave him a loose handful from his pocket.

The next day he came back and asked for the white man. "For," said he, "I found a quarter of a dollar among the tobacco."

"Why don't you keep it?" asked a bystander.

"I've got a good man and a bad man," said the Indian, pointing to his breast; "and the good man says: 'It is not mine, give it back to the owner.' The bad man says: 'Never mind, you got it, and it is your own.' The good man says: 'No, no; you must not keep it.' So I don't know what to do, and I think to go to sleep, but the good and the bad men keep talking all night, and trouble me; and now I bring the money back, I feel good."

Like the Indian, we have all a good man and a bad man within. The bad man is Temptation, the good man is Conscience, and they keep talking for and against many things that we do every day.

Who wins? That is the question; and the answer decides a child's character for his life and the life to come. Who wins? Stand up for duty. Down with sin! Wrestle with temptation manfully. Never, never give up the war till you win.—Selected.

Why Drink?

What excuse can man offer for learning to drink?

The young man with life before him and a commendable ambition to be successful can ask no more important question, seeing that drink has spoiled the careers of so many. Nor can successful business men do a greater work for the world socially and materially than to answer this question.

The temperance question used to be treated sentimentally. That was before business began to dominate everything in this country. The temperance orator in those days contented himself with panting the horrors of the drunkard's home, and he did it in the fiercest colors.

The days of sentiment have been gliding by until an era has been ushered in that demands action rather than talk.

It is no longer a question whether drinking is merely sinful and wasteful, but does it pay? If so, how, or in what way? The answer to the question must be given by the successful business man and not by the sentimental alone.

If it does not pay, why indulge in it? That is the practical common sense question of the hour and the one that thousands of young men are waiting to have answered before starting out in life.

And business men are answering it by refusing to employ men who drink.—Exchange.

Communicated.

MR. EDITOR:—I crave just a little space in your paper to give expression to my opinion relative to the recent developments in connection with the incendiarism with which McConnellsburg has been plagued for some time.

In the article in last week's NEWS one sentence caught my attention. It was the expression, "To add to the tension to which our people are wrought up," etc. Well! Who would have thought it? Is it possible that, at last, the people have been aroused? That does seem to be the case, at least it has taken all this time.

For several years the property owners and taxpayers of McConnellsburg have been obliged to be in a more or less constant state of dread because of the work of some friend, or friends, who went about attempting to destroy their fellowman's property. Doubtless many a citizen retired at night harassed by the thought that, ere the rising sun of a new day would dispel the mists from the valley, the match might be applied and some of his own property go up in flames. Indeed, at almost any hour of day or night the cry of "Fire!" might be expected to resound through the quiet streets and the citizens be called upon to exert strenuous efforts to defeat the malicious purpose of some public enemy and save their neighbor's property from destruction.

And, at last, the people are aroused! Yes, be it said to their credit that they seem to have thrown off their sluggishness, or foolish fear, or whatever it might properly be called; they have asserted the imperial power of their American citizenship and started Justice out in pursuit of the dastardly perpetrator of crime,—this vile specimen of humanity—blot on society—personification of human depravity—fiend in human form—aye, devil incarnate. After calling in some outside help, the supposed offender is apprehended and—jailed (so to speak).

But now, ye gods, behold! A man trained in running down lawbreakers has scarcely placed a suspect virtually in the hands of the proper authorities until he is said to have "escaped" (?) and at once it is rumored, and later seemingly confirmed, that an official is implicated in the prisoner's escape. Think of it! O, the shame that suspicion should rest upon any man who in his official capacity represents the executive department of the government, one supposed to carry out the mandates of the law,—such an one to be accused of playing traitor to the common good, proving false to his trust, and betraying the confidence of those by whom he is placed in a position of protector of the people.

Fulton county has long lain under the stigma of being behind the times—the only county in the state without modern methods of transportation, and of being able to produce only buckwheat and hoop-poles, notwithstanding that she has sent out into the world many worthy sons who are doing their share of the world's work and playing well their part in the drama of life. But now, is the sum total of the criminality of the state in general and of Fulton county in particular to be increased and the latter to be held up as a laughing-stock because of this perversion of justice? Are citizens, when they get beyond the geographical confines, to be ashamed to own it as the place of their nativity, and blush because of the derogatory remarks made in reference to it? Rather may we not hope that the populace, as one man, will rise in righteous indignation and carry forward what a few right-thinking, public-minded citizens have already started, that justice may be meted out and the people place themselves on equal footing with any other law-abiding community in this commonwealth.

From the reports current there are at least two criminals at large in this state, both of whom should receive a good, substantial sentence to the penitentiary, that they may there have ample time to reflect that "the way of the transgressor is hard," and that betrayers of public trust shall not go unpunished.

Section 1. Be it resolved by the Senate and House of Representatives of the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania in General Assembly met. That the following amendment to the Constitution of Pennsylvania be and the same is hereby proposed, in accordance with the eighteenth article thereof:—

That section six of article five be amended, by striking out the said section, and inserting in place thereof the following:

Section 6. In the county of Philadelphia all the jurisdiction and powers now vested in the district courts and courts of common pleas, subject to such changes as may be made by this Constitution or by law, shall be in Philadelphia vested in five distinct and separate courts of equal and co-ordinate jurisdiction, composed of three judges each. The said courts in Philadelphia shall be designated respectively as the court of common pleas number one, number two, number three, number four, and number five, but the number of said courts may be by law increased, from time to time, and shall be in like manner designated by successive numbers. The number of judges in any of said courts, or in any county where the establishment of an additional court may be authorized by law, may be increased, from time to time, and whenever such increase shall amount in the whole to more, such three judges shall compose a distinct and separate court as aforesaid, which shall be numbered as aforesaid. In Philadelphia all suits shall be instituted in the said courts of common pleas without designating the number of the said court, and the several courts shall distribute and apportion the business among them in such manner as shall be provided by rules of court, and each court, to which any suit shall be thus assigned, shall have exclusive jurisdiction thereof, subject to change of venue, as shall be provided by law.

In the county of Allegheny all the jurisdiction and powers now vested in the several numbered courts of common pleas shall be vested in one court, composed of all the judges in commission in said courts. Such jurisdiction and powers shall extend to all proceedings at law and in equity which shall have been instituted in the several numbered courts, and shall be subject to such changes as may be made by law, and subject to change of venue as provided by law. The present judge of said court shall be selected as provided by law. The number of judges in said court may be by law increased from time to time.
