Many "Holy Cities." This is a name bestowed by any sect or nation upon the city most closely associated with its religious beliefs and observances, and that has become a place of veneration consequently, or special worship.

Allahabad is the holy city of the Indian Mohammedans.

Benares is the holy city of the Hindus, while Cuco is that of the ancient Incas.

SELF DELUSION. Many People Deceived by Coffee.

We like to defend our indulgences and habits even though we may be convinced of their actual harmfulness.

A man can convince himself that whiskey is good for him on a cold morning, or beer on a hot summer day—when he wants the whiskey or beer.

It's the same with coffee. Thousands of people suffer headache and nervousness year after year but try to persuade themselves the cause is not coffee—because they like coffee.

"While yet a child I commenced using coffee and continued it," writes a Wis. man, "until I was a regular coffee fiend. I drank it every morning and in consequence had a blinding headache nearly every afternoon."

"My folks thought it was coffee that killed me, but I liked it and would not admit it was the cause of my trouble, so I stuck to coffee and the headaches stuck to me."

"Finally, the folks stopped buying coffee and brought home some Postum. They made it right (directions on pkg.) and told me to see what difference it would make with my head, and during that first week with Postum my old affliction did not bother me once. From that day to this we have used nothing but Postum in place of coffee—headaches are a thing of the past and the whole family is in fine health."

"Postum looks good, smells good, tastes good, is good, and does good to the whole body."

Name given by Postum Co., Battle Creek, Mich. Read "The Road to Wellville," in pkgs.

Postum now comes in two forms: Regular Postum—must be well boiled.

Instant Postum—In a soluble powder. A teaspoonful dissolves quickly in a cup of hot water and, with cream and sugar, makes a delicious beverage instantly. Grocers sell both kinds.

"This is a Reason" for Postum.

HELPS RURAL LIFE

SECRETARY HOUSTON'S PLAN IS ROUSING INTEREST ALL OVER COUNTRY.

FARMERS' WIVES ARE AIDING

Fifty Thousand Have Sent Suggestions on Improving Conditions and These Are Being Applied by Department of Agriculture.

By GEORGE CLINTON.

Washington.—Wives of the farmers of the land to the number of 50,000 have responded by letter to the request of the agricultural department that they tell of home life in the country and make suggestions as to what the department can do to improve conditions, and to make the rural life more attractive for all the members of the household.

Recently the secretary of agriculture let it be known through the publicity bureau that he wished to make his department useful, not only to the farmer, but to the others of the household. The women were asked to write and they responded quickly and readily and in nearly every case, intelligently. It is the intention of the government's agricultural officials to prepare and send out bulletins of instruction and information to the rural housewives of the country telling them how they can lighten their labors, shorten their hours of work, make their homes attractive, save money and make money and after doing it all find that they have left time for rest, reading and bodily recreation.

Exchange of Advice. Already the farmers' wives of the country have received from the government's advisory bureau housekeeping, food-preparing, fruit-preserving and other instructions which on the face of things seems to mark Secretary Houston as a teacher of high standing in the domestic arts. It is probable that the secretary of agriculture will be the first one to put the credit where it belongs. The women have done it. Advice from Alabama today is being applied to California and advice from California is being applied in Alabama, and put any other two states in the places of those named and the same thing holds true.

Before long it is the intention of the department to prepare plans for the construction and proper arrangement of farm houses. They will vary in detail "geographically." The same plans will not serve for a Florida farmhouse that will serve for one in Oregon. Convenience and comfort will be consulted with a view to the adaptation of the house to the special needs of the family of a farmer.

Is Currency Law Prize or Blank? Now that the currency bill has become a law, the natural and perhaps apprehensive question becomes, is it to work good or ill to the banking and the general business interests of the country? Does one seem to put the plane of intelligence low when he says that, with the exception of half a dozen senators and representatives who have spoken directly to the point, no one can be found in the capital city, outside of those who speak enthusiastically simply because they are partisans, willing to give a specific answer to the question concerning the business results of the new currency law?

The solemn truth is that apparently no man understands currency to its roots. Finance is a question which has been the subject of controversy for hundreds, yes, even thousands of years. There are as many views on the proper way to make a sound currency as there are men able to express any view at all. Of the witnesses who appeared before the committee sitting in consideration of the currency measure, only one or two were willing to prophesy actual disaster as the result of the passage of the bill and only a few are willing to declare as a certainty that specific benefit would come from its enactment. During the debate on the tariff bill which is now the law there were plenty of Republicans in both houses willing to prophesy disaster to the business interests of the country because of the cut in customs. The tariff was a familiar subject.

Few Even Pretend to Know. During the debates on the currency bill, many of the Republicans "sat speechless." Others, braver, spoke their minds, but those who thus spoke were few in number. Why was there reticence on currency and gibbness on the tariff? The reason is as simple as a primer. There are not more than ten men in the house and senate who understand currency matters and all except the ten who understand, or who think they understand, were willing to keep quiet, lest they show their and toilet wear, including bathtubs and sinks, is lead glazed—the glaze containing from 5 to 20 per cent. of unchanged and therefore poisonous white lead. In decorated wear the per cent. is as high as 40 to 50. The dangers that follow from dust filled atmosphere, dusty floors, hands carelessly washed, if washed at all, at lunch hour, are conditions that should call for immediate remedy.

Exploring the Air. All records for altitude tests and investigations into the skyward regions where air grows scarce and illimitable space begin have been broken in southern California.

The results of the investigations into the upper air currents conducted at Catalina Island last July by government experts show that one of the automatic recording balloons used in the tests reached the immense altitude of 20.4 miles, or a greater distance from the earth than man has hitherto had knowledge of.

The southern California "climate" is approximately three miles in thickness.

ignorance or predict something which might not be fulfilled.

As far as the congress of the United States is concerned, the currency law is an experimental measure. Senators and representatives know what the banking interests have said in favor of the bill and against it. They realize that the "doctors" disagree and if the doctors disagree how can the layman decide?

President Wilson's currency measure will not come into full operation for some time. In Washington its results are looked upon much as were the results of the drawings of the old Louisiana lottery. It may be major prize legislation, it may be minor prize legislation, or it may be blank legislation representing the loss of all the energy which was put into its passage plus the loss of business stability.

Wilson Seems Confident.

So it is that the currency measure, over the passage of which a sigh of relief went up because it brings with it cessation of congressional labors and a surcease of present sorrows, will become the law of the land and go into operation without any definite knowledge, so far as Washington officials are concerned, as to whether it is to "do" the country or to do something for the country.

President Wilson seemingly is sure that money will be easier, that Wall street will not get its "hog's share" in times of stress, that stability underlies the law in every one of its classes, and yet Mr. Wilson may be mistaken. He admitted before the bill was introduced that he did not understand the currency question thoroughly. Has he been able to master it in three months? Other men who have studied money and its ramifications through the avenues of peace for years are ready to confess today that they are still groping. The law is to go into operation. There will be no more surprise in Washington at its failure to do what it is intended to do than at its success. On currency matters the lawmakers have been guessing and now after all the weeks of debating it can still be said that perhaps one man's guess is as good as another's.

Remarkable Work in Alaska.

Lieut. Col. Wilds P. Richardson, United States army, chairman of the board of road commissioners for Alaska, has come "out of the wilderness" to Washington to report at headquarters. Colonel Richardson and his fellow road builders, Lieut. Glen Edgerton, corps of engineers; and Lieutenant Louis A. Kunzig, Thirtieth United States Infantry, have supervised the construction and have attended to the details of administration of a government road which runs from Valdez near the coast to the town of Fairbanks, and over which in the summer time automobiles find easy passage.

Perhaps when one reads this short statement of road construction the task appears to be nothing phenomenal, but it must be remembered that this road, which the army officers planned, laid out and built runs through 400 miles of what is virtually a wilderness. The natural difficulties which are overcome seemingly were enough to discourage the hardest and most resourceful of men, but the road has been built and it has cost the government $1,000 a mile less than the estimate made by engineers who went over the proposed road nine years ago.

This government road, which has opened up Alaska to wagon traffic in summer and to the traffic of mail sleighs and other "sledding vehicles" in the winter, cost $2,500 a mile to build. Army engineers fixed the prospective amount of expenditure at $3,500 a mile. The road today is as good as the ordinary country road and if the government chooses to expend an additional $1,000 for each mile of construction, which the engineers recommended, it can be made one of the model roads of the country.

Hardest Kind of a Job.

There is a plan at present for the government to build railroads in Alaska to be owned and possibly to be operated by Uncle Sam. It is said in Washington that if the government's railroad shall be constructed as well and as economically as the wagon road which Colonel Richardson and his associates have just completed, the tax payers of the country and the travelers who use the rail way well may be satisfied with government work. Road building in Alaska is a hard task. All sorts of conditions must be met. Landslides, torrents, glacial action and a variety of assortment of problems, to the layman seemingly impossible or foolproof, confront the builders at intervals all along the line of construction. For years Colonel Richardson has been at his work, and last fall with his colleagues he made the trip over the new roadway the whole distance from Fairbanks to Valdez in an auto truck.

Lieutenant Colonel Richardson, who has spent so many years in the government service in Alaska, is a sturdy Texan. He graduated from the United States military academy in 1884.

The ONLOOKER BY HENRY HOWLAND Wait and See

I'm going to journey far away. Some day; I'm going to seek a fairer clime. Some time; I'm going to do some splendid thing To cause The world to get to noticing And pause. No longer disinclined to see, But very glad to tender me Applause.

Some day I'll cause world-wide surprise—I'll rise To proudly claim success as mine And admit; Some day I'll take my place among The few; Some day my praises shall be sung To you; I'll do the great thing—wait and see—When there is naught else left for me To do.

Punishment.

"Poor Mr. Diggleham! Isn't it a shame that he has been so foolish! I can't understand why a man should go wrong as he has. It seems to me that he ought to have known he would get found out. What do you suppose he did with all the money?" "Lost it speculating, I suppose."

"I'm awfully glad they are not going to send him to jail. It would kill his poor wife. She seems to be awfully crushed."

"Well, I am inclined to believe they are making a mistake in letting him off so easily. That's the sort of thing that causes people to ignore our laws. When one man is let off others think they may go wrong and also get their friends to intercede."

"Still, he is to be turned out of church, you know. That will be punishment enough, I should think."

"Great heavens! you don't call being turned out of church punishment, do you?"

O, Noble Judge.

The world again seems fair, My heart once more is light; Around me everywhere All I behold is bright; I feel superbly rich; The alimony which In future shall be mine Will be enough to take Away the foolish ache; 'The judge was just-divine!'

HE.

I'm free again! I'm free! How beautiful and bright The old world seems to be— My heart once more is light, The attorney I Shall have to pay her—why? 'Tis small beside the price I had to pay before She turned me from the door; Gee, but the judge was nice!

Why She was Worried.

"But, mother, why do you object to my being pleasant to the young men? You can't hope to keep me with you always, you know. One of them will take me away from you some day."

"Take you away from me? Well, if that happens I shall not complain. It is the certainty that none of the young men who have been coming here so far would take you away that has worried both your father and me."

His Winning Way.

"It seems queer that she ever took a fancy to him. He isn't at all the kind of man one would expect her to admire."

"I know; but he always had a way of noticing it when she happened to have on a new hat or a gown that had just come from the dressmaker's."

Hard for Mother.

"I suppose you often find it rather trying to have six marriageable daughters on your hands?"

"Oh, I don't mind it so much myself, but my wife has a pretty hard time of it, seeing that she can't possibly watch at more than one keyhole at a time."

Why?

"Do you believe the truth should be spoken at all times?"

"No. When your wife comes home with a new hat and wants to know whether you think it is becoming why tell her that it isn't, even if it makes her look like a fright!"

Wonders of Science.

"Oh, mamma," said little Albert, who was having his first view of an aeroplane action, "see the cattle pen flying."

Seasonable Dialogue. The shades of the goose and turkey were discussing the circumstances which had attended their respective deaths.

"Did you offer any objection when first the cruel farmer laid hands on you?" sympathetically inquired the gobbler.

"Yes," replied his goosehip; "I cried out, 'Halloa! what's this?'"

"What did you say next?" inquired the now thoroughly interested turkey, as the other paused for a moment.

"Oh," the goose replied, "I did not say anything more just then; I was wrung off."

ECZEMA ITCHED AND BURNED

R. F. D. No. 8, Maryville, Tenn.—"My baby, when three months old, took eczema on his face and head. His head and one side of his face were almost in a solid sore. The eczema at first was kind of a rash and then it broke out in water pimples and they would burst and looked very badly. It would itch and burn so badly that he could not rest at all and his hair just all fell out at once till his head was perfectly bald. He could not sleep at night and was very cross. I tried remedies without any relief at all; he only got worse all the time until I used Cuticura Soap and Ointment. He had great relief the first application. He was soon cured and his hair began to grow back and now he has just beautiful fine hair and has no sign of eczema." (Signed) Mrs. H. D. Clabough, Jan. 28, 1913.
