TEACHER SLAIN BY FORMER PUPIL

Lad She Expelled Charged With Wanton Crime.

TRIED TO REFORM HIM

Mutilated Body Of Lydia Beecher Found In the Bushes At Poland, N. Y.—She Had Gone Out At Night To Mail a Letter.

Little Falls, N. Y.—Eugene Gianini, a 17-year-old boy, just out of a reformatory, confessed, the police assert, that he was the murderer of Miss Lydia Beecher, teacher in a country school at Poland, whose body was found in a clump of woods in the outskirts of that village.

The boy, who had been expelled from Miss Beecher's school some time ago and had been pleading with her for reinstatement, admitted, the police say, that he struck the young woman with a monkey wrench and then stabbed her to death with a knife.

He told the authorities where the weapons might be found. Only a bare outline of the confession was given out by the police pending the putting of his admissions into writing.

Miss Beecher, who was the daughter of the Reverend and Mrs. William A. Beecher, of Sennett, near Auburn, and who was only 20 years old, taught school in Poland for two years. Gianini was one of her most troublesome pupils. On her complaint he was expelled from the school last June and sent to St. Vincent's Reformatory, in Utica, from which he was released a month ago.

He sought out his former teacher, told her he intended to do better and implored her to visit his parents, who are reputable and well-to-do people in Poland, to explain how he might be reinstated in the school.

Miss Beecher had been studying for missionary work and it is believed that in her desire to reform him she walked with him and was killed. Charles Gianini, father of the youthful prisoner, was a furniture manufacturer of New York, first coming to Poland to spend a summer and finally taking up his home there, about five years ago. He is an ornithologist of some note and has contributed articles on that science to magazines.

The parents of the murdered girl arrived in Poland to take their daughter's body home. They had been advised that Miss Beecher was seriously ill, but were grief-stricken when on passing through Syracuse on the way to her they saw a newspaper telling of the murder.
