UNVEILING OF BARRY STATUE

Memorial to the Father of the American Navy.

WILSON'S STIRRING ADDRESS

President Wilson Defines Patriotism As Not a Mere Sentiment, But a Principle—Secretary Daniels Presided.

Washington, D. C.—In the presence of several thousand persons, including members of the Cabinet, senators, representatives, Army and Navy officials of high rank and members of Irish-American organizations from all sections of the country, and with President Wilson the principal speaker and Secretary of the Navy Josephus Daniels presiding, a bronze statue of Commodore John Barry, "Father of the American Navy," was unveiled in Franklin Park here.

After an invocation by Bishop Alfred Harding, Secretary Daniels introduced President Wilson, who, drawing inferences from the life of Barry, gave his views on what constitutes real patriotism.

"Patriotism," he said, "is a principle, not a mere sentiment. No man can be a true patriot who does not feel himself shot through and through with a deep ardor for what his country stands for, what its existence means, what its purpose is declared to be in its history and in its policy."

Need No Alliances.

"John Barry fought like every other man in the Revolution in order that America might be free to make her own life without interruption or disturbance from any other quarter. You can sum the whole thing up in that—that America had a right to her own self-determined life."

"There are just as vital things stirring now that concern the existence of the nation as were stirring in the time of the Revolution and every man who worthily stands in this presence should examine himself and see whether he has the full conception of what it means that America shall live her own life."

The President referred to the creed of the revolutionary heroes by saying that Washington and Barry were the men who first saw that America must live her own life without "entangling alliances."

THEY FOUGHT FOR A WIDOW.

Both Duellists Killed and the Lady Wounded.

Lexington, Ky.—Word reached here that Hubbard Minnard, aged 17, son of County Attorney J. B. Minnard, of Leslie county, and Joseph Hensley, a member of a prominent Leslie county family, had killed each other in a pistol duel at Coons' Creek, near Hyden. According to the report, Minnard was escorting Mrs. Daisy Adams to a social function when the couple met Hensley. A quarrel ensued, both men drew pistols and the firing ended with the death of both, while one of the bullets hit Mrs. Adams, but the latter's wound is not considered dangerous.

HOME WRECKER SLAIN.

Virginia Farmer Shot By Wealthy Lumberman.

Wytheville, Va.—Ben Wilson, a farmer of near Max Meadows, Va., was shot and killed here by Samuel Davidson, a wealthy lumberman, Davidson charged Wilson with ruining his home. A few moments before the shooting Davidson purchased a shotgun, and approaching within a few feet of Wilson, where he leaned against the horse upon which a friend was seated, deliberately fired, the shot taking effect near the temple.

ACCEPT NO FAVORS.

The Mexican Delegates Decline To Be Uncle Sam's Guests.

Washington, D. C.—Huerta's mediation envoys, Elguero, Rodriguez and Rabasa, have flatly refused all courtesies proffered by the government of the United States. After much hesitation and many conferences prompted by insistent offers from American government officials, the Huerta trio, including the inscrutable Rabasa, with his great round, black goggles, made it plain that they would pay their own way and care for themselves all the time they are in this country.

GUNBOAT FLEES FROM AIRSHIP.

Mexican Ship Morelos Set On Fire By Bombs From Sky.

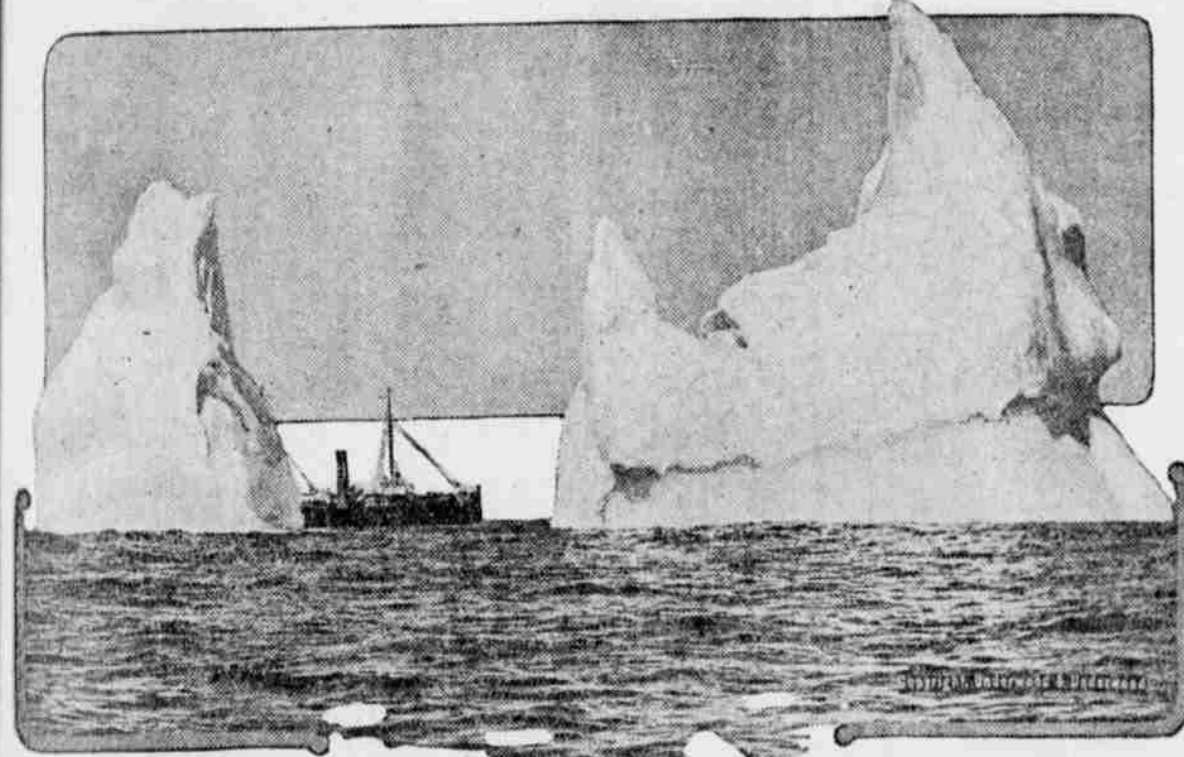

Durango, Mexico.—The vulnerability of war vessels to the attack of aeroplanes was demonstrated Saturday, according to a message received here by General Carranza, when the Federal gunboat Morelos, which has been one of the effective defenses of Mazatlan against Constitutionalists' attack, was forced to put to sea with her upper works on fire to escape the bombs of the Constitutionalist aeroplane fleet.

$5,000,000 FOR DIPLOMACY.

Appropriation Bill As Passed By the House.

Washington, D. C.—The diplomatic and consular appropriation bill aggregating $5,000,000 was passed by the House. It provides for the acquisition of embassy sites and buildings at Tokio at $150,000; in Bern, Switzerland, at $140,000, and in Mexico City at $150,000. During the debate on the Mexico City Embassy, Representative Wingo, of Arkansas, protested it would be a waste of money.

GIGANTIC ICEBERGS IN PATH OF ATLANTIC STEAMERS

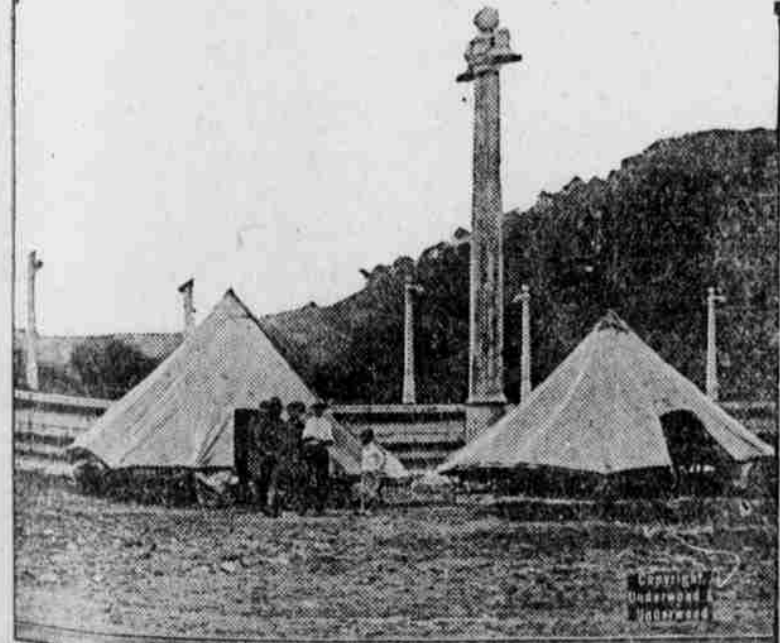

The United States revenue cutter Seneca, which is patrolling the North Atlantic, recently reported sighting these immense icebergs that were moving rapidly southward in the path of ocean liners. They were about one hundred and twenty-five feet high above the water line.

FIGHTING IN TAMPICO'S OUTSKIRTS

Advance trenches of the federals outside Tampico repulsing an attack by the constitutionalists. These soldiers and their mates finally were driven from the city and fled to the south.

PROTECTING THE PANAMA CANAL

To guard against any possible attack on the Panama canal there is now stationed at each of the locks one company of United States infantrymen. The photograph shows some of the soldiers and their tents at Pedro Miguel.

She serves without pay and her official title is "chairman of the national committee on Red Cross nursing service." Miss Delano is a graduate of Bellevue hospital, New York city.

Plea for Cleaner Statues.

Country cousins, visiting in London, demand to know what is wrong with London monuments, or many of them. Well they may, for quite a number of our bronze effigies are, at this moment, in a most unsightly condition as a result of what is said to be "cleaning." The Gladstone figure in the Strand, the Shaftesbury memorial fountain at Piccadilly Circus, and many another, are coated in verdigris, the dried swillings of some noxious fluid which has run down onto the stone below and made it green also—though not with envy, one would think. The whole produces a most bilious and sickening sight. Why cannot these bigger bronzes be kept as clean and "bronzey" as the two Herculean athletes in the Embankment Gardens—the best and best-kept figures in London?—London Chronicle.

Herring De Luxe.

A writer in a London paper asks the question: "Did you ever eat the fish called a bloater in a first-class restaurant?" And then he answers the question: "I did the other night. It was quite an inferior specimen, but they called it 'herring grille a la maitre d'hotel,' and it took 25 minutes to prepare it—which name and preparation added greatly to the price charged. The bloater is a herring, and the annual yield in Norway, Sweden and on the British coast is about four thousand millions of this fish, or about that number of pounds. When it comes to serving fish to a patron, whether it is European or an American restaurateur, the proprietor with malice aforethought proceeds to treat the patron as a malefactor, so far as he can, by levying a special tax upon him. Even at our lakeside resorts, where it may be supposed that fish should be abundant, the resorters are discouraged from asking for this article of diet and are switched off to beef and bacon."

Irishman's Wit.

"The Irishman is not afflicted with the Englishman's dread of finding himself in a social impasse. He knows he will be perfectly well able to extricate himself, whilst the Englishman is painfully aware that he will not. The Englishman's first thought, on entering a stranger's house, is how he will be able to get out of it again if he wants to. The Irishman suffers no such qualms, secure that his native wit will help him to a successful exit."—From Sheep Track, by Nesta Webster.

How Khaki is Dyed.

Khaki is an invention of the Hindus. The word means "earth-color." It was at first produced by immersing the cloth in a bath of manure. Other dyes used in India have been burnt chiecy, catechu and diamines. The modern khaki is produced by dyeing in a mixture of oxide of iron and oxide of chromium. It can be obtained by dipping the stuff into a bath of ferrous sulphate and spreading out to dry in the air. In practice the process is more complex, solutions of ferrous sulphate, pyrolignite of iron, acetate of chromium and alum being employed in combination. The tissue takes up a large quantity of the metallic precipitate.
