INCENDIARY SUSPECTS

Harrisburg,-Although united action of insurance companies in forming a "blacklist" of all persons suspected of arson and incendiaries, in connection with the collection of claims, would be desirable, such a combination could be fought in the courts as a conspiracy. This, in substance, was the testimony of W. B. Flickinger, of Erie, general agent of the western department of the Philadelphia Underwriters, before the State Insurance

He said that in the conduct of his own business, he lists the suspects on the report of the adjuster who settles the claims, but that the exchange of such information between companies is not favorably looked upon by the courts.

Mr. Flickinger said the element of "moral hazard" that Is, of incendiaries and arson, in large measure, was due to over-insurance.

"The moral hazard," Mr. Flickinger said, "arises from the fact that people are able to collect insurance and make a profit on the deal. Over-insurance is the most difficult evil we have to contend with. It is due to unscrupulous agents who give inflated values on personal property."

State legislation to restrict the "farming out" among foreign companies of insurance written on Pennsylvania properties, was advocated by place the last ten years. Henry M. Gratz, president of the Girard Fire & Marine Insurance Com-

By this action the two fiscal officials came right into the open with a move to block any work being done on the badly run down highways about which there has been so much complaint. When one of the cases was being argued Attorney General John C. Bell invited M. Hampton Todd, former Attorney General and counsel for Young, to argue the constitutionality of the act. but he declined. This indicated an intention to block, it was asserted, which the Judges upset by passing on the constitutionality. When the appeal was filed by Thomas H. C. Richton, cashier of the Treasury, and C. J. Rogers, Jr., chief of accounts of the Auditor General, who are counsel; they gave notice of intention to apply for a supersedeas. The Attorney General's department announced that it would combat that move because it would continue the holdup of road repairs by depriving the Highway Department of the money paid by automobile owners and intended by the Legislature to be spent in mainte-
