A well known manufacturer of grain cradles in Franklin county cradles this season than in any one season for many years. This leads one of our reporters (who by-the-way is a bachelor) to observe that, with all our boasted progress, the rocking cradle seems to be going out of use faster than the grain cradle.

Chief Burgess, W. A. Sloan desires the NEWS to express to our citizens his appreciation of the hearty manner in which they responded to the call to clean Water street; he feels that he but voices the sentiment of the whole | this remedy. community. He said that a little more oil would have been an improvement, but that Council had to "cut according to cloth."

Last Thursday evening, Flora, falo, N. Y. ten-year-old daughter of Abram Pittman residing on the pike about two miles west of McConnellsburg, fell from a cherry tree and injured one of her arms. Dr. Mosser took the little girl and her father to the Chambersburg hospital Friday afternoon, where the X-ray test was applied The little girl is getting all right again.

Rev. W. A. Carver, pastor of the M. E. church, and Mrs. Carver, left here on Monday afternoon on a visit to their son, Prof. A. H. Carver at Lexington, Mass. They expect to be gone over two Sabbaths. The United States Bureau of owners of chickens concerning the superiority of infertile eggs, not only for use, but for keeping qualities. Large shippers of eggs do not permit roosters with the laying hens unless the eggs er, one day last week. are intended for hatching. If a hen sit on eggs over night, life appears in the germ of a fertile egg, and when such eggs are put into the market basket the germ dies and rots, and by the time the eggs reach city markets they are classed as "spots and rots." One reason for the low price of eggs is the fact that dealers must make allowance for this waste, and quote prices to country stores and hucksters accordingly, in order to offset the cost of candling them, and to make up for the bad eggs.

BRAGGART LOST HIS NERVE Wanted, For Sale, For Rent, Cool Courage of the Soldier Whom He Had Threatened to Kill Was

dent of the second French republic, the officer in command at Lyons was General Castellane, a veteran whose stern rule kept in check the riotous spirit of that disorderly city.

One of the most boisterous citizens was a barber, who openly boasted that he only waited for an opportunity to rid the city of its stern commandment.

The general heard of the threat and one afternoon ordered his coachman to drive to the barber's shop. Leaving his carriage, the general entered the shop unattended, took a vacant chair and desired the barber to shave him. The astonished braggart performed the operation as well as his nervousness would permit. When he had finished the general paid him and said quietly:

"Monsieur, since you have not availed yourself of the opportunity I have given you to cut my throat, would it not be wise to refrain from uttering threats that you have not the courage to carry out?"

Commodore Peary, discussing hotels with a Washington reporter "Modern hotels are becoming more and more luxurious. Every bedroom now has its private bath and dressing room. These hotels can't do enough to make you comfortable," Commodore Peary stroked his mustache and smiled.

"In fact," he said, "when I stopped, just after my return from the north pole, at Simeon Ford's luxurious hotel, Mr. Ford bowed and rubbed his hands and said anxiously:

"'We shall do everything to make you feel at home. Would you like a nice large cake of ice in your bed,

FAMOUS FRENCH ARCHITECT.

Eugene Emmanuel Viollet-Leduc, a celebrated architect of whom France was justly proud, was born in Paris 100 years ago. In his youth he studied architecture under the famous Leclere. When he was fairly started on his career he devoted himself principally to Gothic and medieval architecture. His work attracted wide attention and he was employed by the French government to super-Leduc all lovers of the mighty cathedrals of Notre Dame and Amiens are eternally indebted for his restorations. HONOR FOR UNITED STATES.

One of the foremost educators of Argentina, Dr. Antonio Vidal, who has spent more than a year in investigating the schools of Europe and the United States, completed his work in Chicago recently. Dr. Vidal said that the United States leads the world in the education of defective children, Germany being its only rival. He said the teaching of sex hygiene in the schools was a subject to which he had devoted much thought and considerable observation, but that it was a question with so many collateral issues that he had not decided in his own mind for or against the innovation.
