The Scotch Highlanders, here seen charging a retreating body of Germans in France, are among the hardest and most stubborn of Great Britain's fighters.

REJOINING THEIR REGIMENTS VIA OSTEND

These soldiers know what it means to stand up before the grueling fire of the Germans. In the heat of battle they were cut off from their regiments around Namur and were compelled, in order to rejoin their colors, to get back through France via Havre. The photograph shows them landing at Ostend.

MACHINES OF THE BRITISH FLYING CORPS

Sir John French has stated that the British flying corps has been rendering invaluable aid to the allies. Some of their machines are here shown. The photograph was taken on the continent, but the censor forbade mention of the locality.

AIRSHIP PROTECTING PARIS

French military dirigible hovering above Paris on the lookout for the German airships which several times sailed over the city and dropped bombs. A crowd of Parisians is seen watching the sky cruiser.

The people of Paris became so accustomed to the visits of the German aeroplanes that they treated them as an amusement.

LOUVAIN'S CATHEDRAL IN RUINS

The magnificent cathedral of Louvain, the interior of which was utterly wrecked by the German troops, although the outer walls remain standing. At the right is the beautiful old hotel de ville, or town hall, which almost alone of the city's buildings was spared.

BIG GUNS RAIN SHELLS ON ARMIES'

Hostile Forces Fight on Doggedly--Both Sides Holding Fast.

Slight Gains Claimed, Without Definite Advantage.

Dispatches from French and British sources relating to the battle between the Allies and the Germans in France represent that the fighting is still going on without material change in the situation, though slight advances by the Allies are claimed. Sunday's fighting, according to a dispatch from the front, consisted principally of artillery action.

An official statement by the German headquarters staff represents that the Allies have been obliged to take the defensive in entrenched positions, and that the Germans have completed preparations for an attack on the fortifications south of Verdun.

Vigorous attacks by the Germans upon the Allies' lines near Rheims have been repulsed, according to the French official report.

Destruction of the famous Cathedral of Rheims and other historic buildings in the French city during its bombardment by the Germans is announced by the French.

An official statement at Petrograd says the Russians are bombarding Przemysl, in Galicia.

Russians have checked the German offensive movement in East Prussia and have captured part of the German artillery sent from Breslau for an attack on Ivangorod, according to a statement given out by the Russian Embassy at Antwerp.

TWO CRUISERS IN DUEL.

British Warship Completely Disabled By German.

London.—There has not been a gun fired in the North Sea for days, so far as the British public knows, but the Admiralty issued bulletins of important encounters in far-off waters. Successes and misfortunes were both chronicled impartially.

The German protected cruiser Koenigsberg caught the British light cruiser Pegasus overhauling her machinery in Zanzibar harbor and attacked and completely disabled her. The British lost heavily and the Koenigsberg was able to steam away.

The British loss is given as 25 killed and 80 wounded.

The German cruiser Emden captured six British merchant steamers in the Bay of Bengal in six days and sank five of them.

On the British side of the score was the sinking of a German merchant cruiser, supposed to have been the Cape Trafalgar or the Berlin, by the former Cunard liner Carmania, familiar to trans-Atlantic travelers, also armed as a cruiser, on September 14 in waters which the Admiralty describes as "off the east coast of South America."

The British loss was small—9 killed and 26 wounded.

The German loss is unknown, but the survivors were rescued.
