In observing the customary Christmas services in the Sunday schools of the town, the M. E. school added an extra feature in the shape of a cantata. Evangelist Jones, who is stirring Athens, paid his respects to gossipers before an audience of 3000 persons last week, saying: "If I had to choose between two evils, I would rather be a drunkard and have my nose as red as this hymnbook than to be a gossiper gadding about the community sowing the seeds of hell."

In a letter advancing her subscription, Mrs. Adam Gress of York, Pa., says that her husband is not very well, and is not working. She also gives the information that Roy D. "Waste Not; Want Not."

Mr. and Mrs. Young couple lived snugly because Mr. Young couple had a good job. He provided liberally for the table. His wife did all her housework and cooking. She did not keep a hired girl. She said that the cost of living was too high to afford help. One day when she was feeling a little "blue" she sat down and wrote to the editor of her home paper and told him that she thought it was a sin and a shame for the Agricultural Department to waste so much money for printing advice to housekeepers, unless the Department told the housekeepers where to get the money with which to carry out the advice. She said further, that if the Department would send her some of the money spent for printing, she would show that institution that she could live better. Well, let us see if she could. The story we have to tell will show whether she could or not. She was one of those "womanly women" who read backwards by turning to the last few pages of the story to see if they married and lived happy ever afterwards, and she always lost the meat of the story and the good hints it contained.

Her nearest neighbor was Mrs. Thrifty whose back yard fence joined hers. Mrs. Thrifty never had any scraps left from her table for the chickens, because all of the perfectly clean left-overs were made into dainty and wholesome puddings, custards, patties and Hamburgers. Noticing that Mrs. Young couple's garbage can was always full to bursting with good chicken feed, Mrs. Thrifty asked for it. Mrs. Young couple was glad to drop it over the fence because, as she said, it saved the fee to the garbage man who hauled it away. What follows of this story you must never tell, because Mrs. Thrifty told it as a "perfect secret." She said that the daily quantity of whole rolls, great slices of good stale bread, big chunks of meat, potatoes, vegetables, fruit and sour milk throw away was greater than any family of three could have eaten if it had not been wasted. And Mrs. Young couple kept on complaining at the Department for its extravagance in giving free advice.

Now, among Uncle Sam's hundred million population, he knows of more than two million other families just like Mrs. Young couple's, and it grieves him greatly that so many of his people have mothers who let their daughters grow up in such ignorance; so he has started out to catch the ear of one here, and one there, until all have learned why it frequently happens that "times are so hard." We Americans need every word of advice on economy that we can get, because we have been accustomed to think that there is no end to the source of our supplies. We "live good," which is right; but so do the French people; but reliable writers tell us that they live sometimes better than we do, but on much less money. Why? Because every mother teaches her daughters that it is not lady-like in good society for them to waste anything. We think, therefore, that Mrs. Young couple should not be so hasty in denouncing her good old Uncle Sam when he does all he can to help her.

Spots Before the Eyes.

The prevalence of this condition has given rise to a great many curious ideas. Almost everyone either sees fixed or floating spots at times, or hears some friend complain of these conditions, so that it is not strange that many popular misconceptions have arisen. The commonest form of floating spots are those which are known by the name of muscae volitantes, an old name which indicates how long the condition has been observed. These are tiny transparent chains, or strings, which are seen especially on a white or brightly illuminated field. They persistently float in the line of vision, and though a shake of the head may carry them out of the way, they at once float back again. These spots are probably caused by the remains in the fluid part of the eye of certain cells which should have been completely absorbed in the development of the eye. They never lead to impairment of vision and, as before stated, are perfectly transparent. Other floating spots are due to coagulated masses of inflammatory material which are thrown out into the fluid of the eye by some low grade inflammation. These spots usually obscure the vision, which is their great point of difference from the former ones. It is, of course, very important to find out in any case whether the spots are due to inflammation, or not, and this can only be done by a skilled observer. It is a prevalent idea that the wearing of a dotted veil may leave permanent spots in the field of vision. While the dotted veil may be a source of strain by causing the wearer to pull on the eye muscles in order to avoid the obstruction to vision, it certainly is not the case that the dots, or any other object seen, can be permanently photographed on the nerve tissues of the eye. There is only one exception to this statement. Many people who have carelessly looked too much at the sun, generally in observing the eclipse, have actually produced a slight inflammatory change in the retina, so that there is always a blurry spot where they look. But it is doubtful if any light less brilliant than the sun can produce a permanent spot, and certainly a dark object can not do so.

New Years Social.

The young people's society of the Lutheran church will hold a social in the home of Mrs. John McLucas on Friday evening. Special games, plays, recitations, songs, music—vocal and instrumental—to harmonize with the season will be on the program. An offering for the Belgian Fund will be received. Invite your friends.—Committee.

DEALER IN

High Grade Plain Pianos, Player Pianos, Organs, Victrolas, Records, and Professional Tuner, McConnellsburg,

Nothing adds more to the refinements of home than good music. To have good music you must have a good instrument. There are good bad and indifferent instruments, and to the unskilled eye they look much alike. The unprincipled dealer is likely to make you pay a first-class price for a fourth-class instrument. I have lived in this county since my birth, I am a taxpayer and in a position to make good any business transactions. Buy your piano, organ, or victrola from me and if it is not all right you can come back at me.

There are families in every part of this county that have purchased instruments from me. Ask them about me.

Perhaps you want to trade your organ for a Piano, or Player Piano; or your Plain Piano, for a Player. See me. Let's talk it over.
