| A city man had occasion, recently, to call upon a local farm- |  |

| v to farm. When he got |  |
|  |  |
| that, evidently, he had missed his calling, and that he should, by all means, go to farming. |  |

| Said the city man, "1 don't think" |  |
| Our local man's significant grin put an end right there to the other man's preaching. |  |

| There is no doubt whatever that much of the "stuff" found |  |
| in print would disappear if the |  |
| writers would spend one year at real work on a farm. They would return to their homes and |  |
|  |  |
|  |  |
| hands off, They would find how |  |
| impractical some things are. The sums spent for real farm papers |  |
|  |  |
| are not begrudged, else there would be no farm papers. But, |  |
| it will be noticed, the farm paper that is sought by the subscriber is one that is managed by |  |
|  |  |
| farmer-writers of experiencemen who know what work on a |  |
|  |  |
| farm means, and who donot hold up rich men's "show farms" as models. A "model" is not a model if it is not practical for ev- |  |
|  |  |
| eryday men to take pattern of it. |  |
