Editors as a rule are kind hearted and liberal. An exchange tells of a subscriber who died and left fourteen years subscription. The editor appeared as the lid of the coffin was being screwed down and put in a linen duster, a thermometer, a palm fan and a recipe for making ice.

Last Friday afternoon when James E. Lyon of West Dublin came to town for his daughter Ruth, they were accompanied to their home by Miss Minnie Dickson who remained until Monday morning when she returned with Ruth and her father in their automobile. Ruth is attending the Summer Normal.

Among the acts passed by our recent legislature, was that of providing convict labor on the highways. The term "convict" includes all persons serving a jail sentence. For each day's labor a convict shall receive 25 cents to be paid upon expiration of his term of sentence, or to dependents, by the county, state, township or municipality. A number of convicts are already employed.

Sunday newspaper readers who know what's what have come to look upon the tabloid fiction magazine in colors as one of the most desirable and attractive features of the complete Sunday paper. Therefore it will interest them to learn that at this time "The Philadelphia Record" Sunday Magazine is the only publication of its kind regularly issued each week by a Philadelphia Sunday newspaper.

You'll like "The Sunday Record" for itself—for its reliable news, its authentic sports, its authoritative weekly departments but you will especially appreciate its superior fiction magazine. Be sure to get your newsdealer to reserve a "Record" for you next Sunday. After that you'll be a regular reader of "The Philadelphia Sunday Record"—and you'll have to settle the family question as to who is to have the first chance at the magazine, only one copy of which is furnished with each copy of the newspaper.

Long Controversy Ended.

The decision of the Supreme Court directing the State of West Virginia to pay her portion of the public debt of old Virginia as it stood when the State was divided ends, it is hoped, a long controversy which ought never to have been raised at all says the Philadelphia Press.

The division of Virginia and the creation of a new State out of the western portion was a war measure apparently justified by the circumstances of that time. But the old State debt was in equity a mortgage on the undivided State and West Virginia should naturally and properly carry her share of that joint burden. The men who framed and ratified the Constitution of West Virginia recognized this claim and directed that an "equitable portion of the debt of Virginia as it stood on January 1, 1861, shall be assumed by this State."

Notwithstanding this constitutional mandate the Legislature of West Virginia never took the steps to pay either the principal or interest of that State's share of the debt. Virginia's many requests for a settlement of the claim has never met with any favorable response. Virginia in the meantime increased her debt and subsequently readjusted or reduced it and acknowledged responsibility for only a portion of it. At the same time it issued certificates for the portion of the debt it thought West Virginia should assume and promised to exert her influence to secure from West Virginia the payment of these certificates, but it did not propose to pay them herself. This did not extinguish Virginia's liability, however and in 1906 that State very properly brought suit against West Virginia and obtained a judgment of $12,300,000 covering the principal and back interest of West Virginia's share of the debt.

This money goes eventually to the certificate holders who have been holding almost worthless West Virginia certificates for many years. Virginia has done her full duty in this matter and West Virginia will be compelled to pay her past debt and make good the pledge of her Constitution. Other States have been able to repudiate their debts because a pernicious amendment of the Federal Constitution forbids individuals to bring a suit against a State. One State may however, sue another in the Federal Courts and by the use of this power Virginia compels West Virginia to pay her share of the joint debt contracted before their separation.

High Grade Plain Pianos, Play Pianos, Organs, Victrolas, Records, and Professional Tuner, McConnellsburg,

Nothing adds more to the refinements of home life than good music. To have good music you must have a good instrument. There are good bad and indifferent instruments, and to the unskilled eye they look much alike. The unprincipled dealer is likely to make you pay first-class price for a fourth-class instrument. I have lived in this county since my birth, I am a taxpayer and in a position to make good any business transaction. Buy your piano, organ, or victrola from me and if it is not all right you can come back at me.

There are families in every part of this county that have purchased instruments from me. Ask them about me.

Perhaps you want to trade your organ for a Player Piano; or your Plain Piano, for a Player Piano. Let's talk it over.
