Big Day at Loudon.

Wednesday of next week will be a big day at Fort Loudon. At that time will take place the unveiling and dedication of the memorial monument and marker consecrated to the memory of the frontiersmen who defended the old fort against Indian marauders. The ceremonies will begin at 10 o'clock and last until 3:00. Fort Loudon (or Loudoun, as it was then spelled) was erected in 1756 the same year that Fort Littleton (Lyttleton) was made, and a year before the fort was erected at Bedford. The old fort was not upon the present site of the town of Fort Loudon, but about a mile southeast. It was built for the protection of the frontiers against the Indians and took the place of the fort at McDowell's mill, which was situated at Bridgeport. Fort Loudon was the scene of many thrilling events during the Indian raids into this region. During the expedition of General John Forbes, in 1758, and that of Col. Henry Bouquet in 1763-64, this fort was used as a rendezvous for troops and as a base of supplies. It was the scene of the exploits of Capt. James Smith and his "Black Boys" in 1765. Before the building of the state road to Pittsburgh, it was the point of departure of great trains of pack horses, laden with goods for the west and south.

Dogs, or Sheep?

Those of our readers who take farm papers are almost getting tired of reading stories about those who prefer to keep a good dog. Some of the writers would have us believe that the man who loves a good dog will eventually "go to the dogs." No one will attempt to deny that dogs are responsible for the disappearance of sheep from many of our farms; but we believe that we could have both sheep and dogs if enough people demanded that the owners of dogs keep them under control. We know of men who keep all the dogs they wish; but they keep them in a pen with a high wire fence around a piece of ground large enough to permit the dogs to romp, play and exercise all they want. A little house in a corner affords a nice shelter. These pens can be placed where the dogs can run to the front door of the dwelling, or to other points of advantage if wanted for watch-dogs. Or, a long piece of fence wire may be stretched between two points and a ring on the end of the dog's chain will run on the wire and permit the animal to run the length of the wire. It would be a hardship to forbid the keeping of hunting dogs in a county like ours where a few weeks of hunting is practically all the sport afforded. Since unwritten laws are best observed, make it a matter of honor among neighbors that they will never take chances by letting their dog have his freedom at night. Let the man who will not comply with the plan feel the weight of his neighbors' ill will for a short time and he will soon come to the scratch. We know of a place where there is no statute law against the killing of doe; but there are no does killed there because to kill one would mean that the killer might just as well pull his stakes and freight it. His fellow sportsmen would in a hundred ways make life for that man so miserable that he would be glad to leave the community. The management of dogs could be enforced in just that way.
