"There's a Reason"

Where Art Thou?

By Rev. Wm. Wallace Ketchum Director of the Practical Work Course, Moody Bible Institute of Chicago

TEXT-And the Lord God called unto dam, and said unto him, "Where art thou?"-Gen. 3:9,

So far as we know this is the first question God ever asked man. It is the question God asked Adam after Adam sinned and was trying to hide himself from the presence of God. Sin always, consciously separates one from God so that the sinner ever tries to get away from the presence of the For Almighty. this reason men close the Bible which brings them face to face with God. This is the cason why some men never darken a church door; they fear that they may meet God. You know we are told that Adam tried to hide himself amidst the trees of the garden just as if maerial things could shut out God's view of him, as if God's eye could not penetrate the trees and see Adam where he was. "The eyes of the Lord," says one of old, "run to and fro throughout the whole earth." And the Psalmist asks, "Whither shall I go from thy spirit or whither shall I flee from thy presence? If I ascend into heaven, thou art there; if I take the wings of the morning and dwell in the uttermost parts of the sea; even there shall thy hand lead me, and thy right hand shall hold me. If I say, surely the darkness shall cover me; even the night shall be light, about me. Yea, the darkness bideth not from thee; but the night shineth as the days; the darkness and the light are both alike to thee." How utterly impossible it is to get away from God. There is no way for man to escape the Almighty; neither earth nor heaven nor hell has in it a hiding place from him. Darkness cannot shut man from his vision. it may hide hellish deeds so that men may not see them, but the eyes of the Almighty not only penetrate through inky blackness but search the innermost recesses of a man's being, God did not ask this question of Adam because he was ignorant of Adam's place in the garden, but he asked it to bring Adam to a realization of his sinful condition, that he might reveal himself to Adam as his savior. This same question he has been asking men down through the ages and he has been asking it for the same reason. Not always in the same words, but nevertheless the same question. He asked it of Cain when he said, "Where is thy brother?" and Cain knew himself a murderer. He asked it of Elijah, when he said, "What doest thou here, Elijah?" and Elijah knew he was not trusting God. He asked it of the woman of Samaria. when Jesus said, "Go call thy husband," and the woman knew herself an adulteress. He has been asking it of you many times and in many ways, He asked it of you when you heard the first time the story of Calvary, and every time you hear the story the same question is asked, "Where art thou?" Calvary is the great revelation of man's sinfulness and God's grace. There, as nowhere else, one sees himself a sinner and there one beholds God's provision to meet his need.

He asked it of you when that great sorrow came into your life. Did you not hear him say, "Where art thou?" Not to condemn you, did he ask it. but to reveal himself unto you as your comforter. He asked it of you when your loved one left you alone. In the loneliness of your life he asked it. that you might find in him your companion. When that calamity came and all your hopes seemed blasted it was his voice that said, "Where art thou?" Didst thou not hear him, child, say this to thee, that thou mightest cast all thy care upon him who careth for thee? Deaf indeed hast thou been to the voice of thy God, if thou hast not heard his loving question. Where art thou? If thou hast heard this question and in the stillness of his preaence realized where thou art and found in him thy savior, happy art thou indeed. But if he has spoken to thee in his providences, as well as his word, and thou hast-not-heard, to what pitch must his voice be raised until thou doest hear and heed? Even now in these words he asks thee, "Where art thou?" Not to condemn thee, but to save thee from thyself, thy sorrow. and thy sin.

Trouble.

There is something sustaining in the very agitation which accompanies the first shocks of trouble, just as an a sute pain is often a-stimulus, and produces an excitement which is transient strength. It is in the slow 'ianged life that follows in the time when sorrow has become stale and has no longer an emotive intensity that counteracts its pain, in the time when day follows day in full unexpectant sameness, and trial is a dreary routine; it is then that despair threatens; it is then that the peremptory hunger of the soul is felt, and car and eye are strained after some unlearned secret of our existence which shall give to endurance the nature of satisfaction.-George Ellot.

Christian's Task Not Hard. To follow Christ does not of necessity involve anything new or unwonted; to be perfect in him does not always need change. There remains only to persevere in lowly obedience to what the conscience witnesses to be the calling wherein he looks to find us when he cometh forth to see how his

LESSON FOR JUNE 18.

THE PHILIPPIAN JAILER.

LESSON TEXT-Acts 15:16-40.
GOLDEN TEXT-Believe on the Lord Jesus and thou shalt be saved, thou and thy house.—Acts 15:3L

Dean Vaughn has said of this lesson that in it "we have an epitome of the whole history of the gospel." The time was A. D. 50 or 52 and the place was Philippi, an important city, as before suggested. I. The Damsel Delivered of Demons (vv. 16-18). On their way to the praying place where they had met Lydia, the disciples met this maid who "had a spirit, a Python." Greek soothsayers were supposed to be inspired by Apollo, who killed a great snake at Mt. Parnassus and left it to rot. The girl was probably possessed of hysteria and thus spoke strange words, and her condition brought much profit to her masters, who professed to interpret her words. This evidence of evil possession awoke a sympathetic response in Paul's heart. "Her misery and degradation were a symbol of the degradation, as Lydia's aweet and benevolent Christian character was of the transfiguration of womanhood."-Stalker. Her cry after Faul was perhaps that they were the slaves or some god, even as she was the slave of Apollo. The Gadarene (Luke 8:28) used similar language. Paul did not at once stop her (v. 8), perhaps to avoid a controversy, but his deliberation made more profound the final deliverance wrought. Worn out at last with her cries, but taking no credit nimself, Paul spoke the name of Power which had foretold just such acts (Mk.

16:17; Lk. 9:1; Lk. 10:17). II. The Disciples in Prison (vv. 19-24.) Of no further commercial value, the slave drivers sought revenge by inciting a mob to attack Paul and his companions. So today the liquor interests would seek remuneration for the loss of their "business," and anathematize their opponents, while the underworld tries to overthrow all who seek to restrain them. Paul and Silas were accused of "troubling" the city, for the trade has been interfered with. It, indeed, went hard with them thus to be unjustly set upon and finally, through the connivance of the spineless authorities, to be incarcerated in a filthy dungeon. Still, thoughthe majority was against them, yet the mob was not right (compare 17:5; 18: 12; 19:28-29), and they had One on their side who was sufficient (Rom. 8:28).

III. Deliverance and Salvation (vv. 25-35). Christ before Pilate was accused of sedition, and these flogged disciples were likewise innocent sufferers. (1) Prayer and praise (25-26). Note the circumstances-darkness, torn and bleeding, aching backs and a morrow filled with blackness. Thero was no sleep for the disciples at that midnight hour, but often strength is better gained in prayer than sleep. "Fraying, they sang hymns,"-in the midst of that heterogeneous lot of prisoners they did not, could not, keep silent. The result was attentive listening by the other prisoners and by a loving Heavenly Father, who shook the place to evidence his interest (v. 26). (2) The jailed delivered. The place was so shaken that every barred door was opened and the staples of the stocks were so loosened as to liberate every prisoner (3) The jailer saved. The brutal one is now the anxicus inquirer, and becomes a good type for all to follow who are cut of Christ. (a) He saw he was lost. He was subject to the same death as his escaped prisoners. "Supposing" (v. 27) has darkened many lives, and our greatest scrrows are often imagined. Face to face with death, the jailer would plunge into an eternity for which ne was not prepared. Paul's clarion ca'l brought the jailer to express his anxity (v. 29), and it was not a trifling nor skeptically indifferent man who appealed to Paul He was brought face to face with two holy men, with God and with eternity. Those to whom he came knew the facts, had faith, and could meet the emergencies of tife with confidence.

IV. The Humbled Magistrates (vv 35-40). The jailer evidences joy, hosritality and a changed home, which news must have reached the magistrates. Their early command was to "let these fellows go." Paul here rises to his full dignity. Beaten openly, condemned without trial and verdict, does not allow them to cover their crime and blunder by stealth.

The magistrates were liable to loss of position, goods, and even life, and hence willingly did all that Paul required.

Merely a Matter of Choice.

THE JUGGLER.

Ladies and Gentlemen: I will now show you how the saloon helps your town financially:

With your kind permission, I shall represent the saloon; Mr. Jones here will represent your town.

You see this roll of bills? It contains twenty thousand dollars in cash (the exact amount of revenue paid by the saloons of your town). You see I now put this twenty thousand dollars down in Mr. Jones' left-hand pocket. Now, I shall give anyone here one hundred dollars in gold who will prove to this audience that Mr. Jones is not exactly twenty thousand dollars richer than he was before. Ah, I see no one is foolish enough to claim this one hundred dollars.

What's that? Will I explain how I can afford to be so generous? With pleasure.

You see, while you were watching me put twenty thousand dollars into Mr. Jones' left-hand pocket, I was busy taking this other roll here out of his right-hand pocket. Now this larger roll contains two hundred thousand dollars (the amount of money received by the saloons of your town from your citizens every year). And so you see that Mr. Jones, instead of being twenty thousand dollars richer than he was before, is really one hundred and eighty thousand dollars poorer.

"Strange you didn't notice that," you say, Not at all. You see, I made so much fuss about the twenty thousand dollars I was putting into Mr. Jones' left-hand pocket that I kept you from seeing me take the two hundred thousand dollars from his right-hand pock-

BETTER OFF WHEN DRIVEN OUT. Just before Rockford, Ill., voted dry one of the saloonkeepers of the town, addressing a meeting of the Retail Liquor Dealers' association, is reported to have said:

"If this town goes dry-as it probably will-you'll put up an awful howl. But cheer up! You'll be better off when you're driven out of the business. I can count on the fingers of one hand all of you who are really making more than wages. The breweries are getting the money. You'll not lose anything financially by being forced into other businesses. Most of you will gain by the change. Nearly everyone of you is going down hill physically. Your saloons are a long way from being health resorts. You get about as much bad air in the course of a day as any set of men in this town. Then most of you take too much of your own medicine and too little exercise. But you'll keep on just as long as you're in the business, and you'll stay in it until you are driven out. And I think the time has

PRACTICAL RESULT IN RUSSIA. Since the prohibition of vodka the price of labor in Russia has gone up in a remarkable manner, says Prof. J. Y. Simpson in the British Weekly. "The peasant banks are full of money." he tells us, "loans have been paid off, and agricultural implements purchased on the installment plan have been bought outright. Having supplied themselves with gramophones and watches and new clothes, the peasants now employ their money in buying land and even securities, or starting little businesses. One hundred million roubles per month used to be spent on yodka; today it remains in the economy of peasant life. On all hands, the people demand that it shall be banished forever. The last speech I heard in the duma was that of a peasant delegate insisting that the permanent prohibition of vodka be embodied in legal enactment now."

KINDNESS TO LIQUOR MEN.

By working for the enactment of prohibitory laws, says the National Woman's Christian Temperance Union, we are doing the kindest thing possible for the men who are making and selling liquor. We are forcing them out of business they themselves despise and compelling them to go into legitimate enterprises where they can serve their fellowmen and gain a better standing in the communityyes, and make more money, too.

RUINED BY ALCOHOL.

Alcohol has seemed to us a nice plaything or even an amiable friend. Today, however, we know that the jolly comrade, for the price of one hour of exhibiration, cheats us out of our self-respect, that it brings to ruin every being and every nation that yielded to it .- Prof. Kraepelin of Germany.

WHISKY THE HANDICAP.

A woman visitor was lafely in a large hospital, where many soldiers were patients. She noticed especially two men wounded in almost exactly the same way; but while one of them-a small Scotchman-was rapidly recovering, the other, a great brawny man, was not doing so well. As she and the doctor stood between .he two beds the blg man asked why he was not getting on as well as his comrade. "Ah!" said the doctor, "I'm afraid it's the whisky, Mac: you see the wee chap is an abstainer."

TRAFFIC EVIL. Dr. Campbell Morgan, the great preacher and student of sociology, says: "It is inconceivable to me that any man, who loves his country, and especially any Christian man can do other at this time than support with all the force of his being any messure which will help to deliver us from the almost immeasurable evil of the drink traffic."

RAVES ABOUT OUR GARDENS

Writer Says They Are So Ravishing, So Sunlit, Abounding in Freshness and Beauty.

"I can't say enough in praise of the American gardens! 1 think I should rave about them if I ever let myself go," exclaimed Miss Carlisle. "They are ravishing-so sunlit, abounding in freshness and beauty! Do you realize that they are so brilliant that I can never show paintings of American gardens in the same room with English gardens, because they make them look quite dreary? Their one fault is that there is often too much statuary in them, and too much of it irrelevant. Frequently, too, they are not rambly enough, and seem a little self-conscious. In English gardens small stones mellow with years are used, and the furnishings add that warmth which breeds intimacy. It is the informal garden that attracts the artist. In England these abound, with their winding paths passing through uneven hedges of many varieties of flowers. That uneven hedge, flashing forth vivid colors, one seldom sees in America, probably because of the fluctuating climate and the vogue of a more formal arrangement,"-Ethel R. Pey-

"'Mr. X., that new hood of yours doesn't suit you at all. I can't imagine why you, with your complexion chose red of all colors in the world. A myrtle green or an old gold would have suited you much better, and would have been far more effective. You men never know how to dress yourselves."

Dickens' Poor Taste in Dress. When Charles Dickens was to make his first appearance in America as a reader an immense crowd awaited him at a public ball in Boston. The en thusiasm of the people had risen to fever heat. One of his most ardent admirers afterward told this little incident of the evening:

"With a few gentlemen, who wished to welcome him and to show him attention. I was in the little room back of the platform when Dickens entered somewhat red face, and I saw, to my surprise, that he was dressed in an exaggerated servility to the extreme of fashion. More than this, he wore a boutonniere in each buttonhole, and two watches, the chains of which were ted, knowing how distasteful it would be to his admirers, who appreciated his genius and enjoyed his writings."

"T've been working here nine years, Mr. Grabcoin. Don't you think it is "I do indeed Mr. Johson."
