U. S. CAPITOL IS AT LAST COMPLETED

The laying of the final stone shown in the photograph completed the construction of the national capitol, which for more than 50 years has been unfinished. This was the last step in the construction of the pediment of the east wing of the house of representatives, a companion piece to the pediments over the main entrance and the senate wing. This portion of the house wing has been blank since the wing was nominally completed in 1857. An appropriation of $75,000 in 1908 provided for the final work of construction. This final pediment has been constructed by Paul Bartlett, who calls the design "The Democracy of the United States as Expressed by the Types of the Working People."

American Cities' Growth.

Nobody knows how fast an American city, state or town may grow. I recall some twenty-five years ago meeting a friend in Denver. He was an investor from the East. I think Denver had about 30,000 people then. He had come to buy real estate. He said to me, "This place is overgrown. Real estate is too high. None for me!" And he went away. Had he invested wisely at that time he could have multiplied his money ten or twenty fold. I was in Los Angeles about the same time. It had had a serious reaction after a sudden boom. It was a little place, not one-tenth its present size. It seemed like a doomed city. An investment of $500 then in outlying acreage property, I am told, would be worth $500,000 today.—Leslie's.

To Be Sure.

Two Irishmen were engaged in a dispute in a cemetery one day. "Well," said one, "I don't like this cemetery at all, at all." "Well," said the other, "I think it is a very fine cemetery." "No," said number one, "I don't like it at all, at all, and I'll never be buried in it as long as I live." "What an unreasonable old fool you are, to be sure," said number one, apparently losing his temper. "Why, man alive, it is a fine cemetery, and if my life is spared, sure I'll be buried in it."—Philadelphia Record.

HEALTH OF MEN IN CAMP GOOD

Troops Complain of Scant Water Supply.

ALLOWANCE IS TOO MEAGER

Precautions Taken to Prevent Outbreak of Disease Have Been Efficacious—Typhoid Vaccination.

El Paso.—There is not one typhoid patient, not a single case of dysentery or nothing to indicate that the health of the men will not improve instead of deteriorate in this camp.

Good health is the prime essential. In 1898 disease swept the camps and hundreds of volunteers died because the officers and enlisted men did not know how to prevent disease nor how to combat it after it took hold.

All has been changed. There's a reason. All soldiers are now fortified against diseases before they are taught the manual of arms. Sanitary inspections and lectures are held daily. Literature on the subject has been distributed and is in the possession of every officer and man. Pennsylvanians received their third and final inoculation against typhoid and many fainted as they did with the previous two.

Cleanliness in cook tents and the wholesome food keep the dread dysentery away. This has all been effected through a set of orders issued that are posted on the bulletin board of every unit encamped here.

Complaints Of Water Supply.

A pint and a half of water a day allotted to each man, is occasioning discontent among members of Troop A, First Pennsylvania Cavalry here.

Day after day the temperature has soared to 120 to 125 degrees. The travel rations, still being dispensed, or hard tack, potatoes, corned beef, beans—and "beans and beans," as one of 'em puts it—however nil they may be in producing "pep," generate plenty of thirst. Wherefore the cavalymen feel that their meager allowance of water indicates poor judgment somewhere. Three menus a day every day of the travel fare don't tend to rub the end off their humor. Sanitation is likewise only fair.

Another cause for complaint is the impossibility of frequent bathing. Only two or three of Troop A have bathed or shaved since leaving the train.

It is reported that ex-Mayor John Weaver, of Philadelphia, will visit here soon. Further reports have it that the marriage of his son, Roy, which did not take place at Mt. Gretna, contrary to rumor, may be staged here.

Greensburg Guardsmen Drowned.

Thomas Hagg, nineteen years old, a member of Company M, Tenth Regiment, N. G. P., was drowned while bathing in the Rio Grande River near Boquillas, Company M is a part of the Third Battalion, under Major Henry Coulter, and was the first company of the Pennsylvania Guards to be placed on active patrol duty on the border. Hagg enlisted with Company M shortly before the President's call came.
