Educational Day.

Last Sabbath was Educational Day in the churches throughout the United States. Rev. J. L. Grove preached on the subject in the morning. In his usual able manner he pointed out how the State recognized its responsibility to instruct the youth of the land in all points that go to make good citizenship. Not only are the fundamentals of a common school education necessary, but vocational subjects, sanitation, and many other things leading to a higher civilization are recognized and taught. To prove our national leaning to Christianity, he pointed to the practice of our courts in requiring recognition of God in the oath, to the opening of all legislative sessions by prayer, to the punishment of certain crimes against morality, and he made reference to many things that mark us as distinctly Christian in character. He then contrasted the absurdity of some of the school laws that debar the use of the scriptures in the common schools in some states, making the practice seem very inappropriate in view of the foregoing recognition of the State's responsibility to make good citizens. He showed plainly how the Bible cannot be taught in thousands of homes, and how these children cannot be reached by the church because they do not, and will not, attend. This plainly puts it up to the State to see to it that the only foundation for good citizenship is taught in unobjectionable ways in the State's own schools. Rev. Grove paid high tribute to the power of the newspapers to raise the standard of education, civilization, and good morals in any community.

They will meet in the the Second Cove church Thursday afternoon September 21st, and in the McConnellsburg church in the evening at 7:30. From the latter place they will go to Concord. A cordial invitation is extended to the public to attend and enjoy these conferences. Dr. Geo. M. Reed, of Newville, will escort the party to McConnellsburg, and Rev. J. L. Grove will accompany them to Concord, although as many as wish to go are urged to make the trip.
